ELECTRIFICATION OF RAILROADS

"An Imperative Need for the Selection of a System for Universal Use"

Railroads will only be "STANDARDIZED" as to the adoption of electricity when there is a system that can be used on them as is the Westinghouse Airbrake. To make ourselves more clearly understood, we beg to quote from a paper prepared for the joint meeting of the American Society M. E. and the Inst. M. E. of Great Britain, London, July, 1910, by Mr. George Westinghouse, president Am. Soc. Mechanical Engineers, and read by him at that meeting:

"THE FUTURE OF ELECTRIFICATION OF RAILWAYS.

"58. - The complete electrification of a railway will necessitate a rearrangement of ideas and practices in regard to operation. Coaling and watering places will not be needed; passenger trains will be differently composed, some classes being of less weight, and they will operate more frequently, thus promoting travel; other trains will be heavier than at present, or will operate at higher speeds, and branch lines, by the use of electrically-fitted cars, can be given a through service not now enjoyed.

"59. The movement of freight will undergo great changes, due to the fact that electric locomotives can be constructed with great excess capacity, enabling them to move longer trains at schedule speed on rising gradients.

"60. The large percentage of shunting operations due entirely to the use of steam locomotives will no longer be required. "62. Notwithstanding the fact that great strides have already been made in cheapening the cost of generating electricity by steam engines, I foresee, from the progress made in the development of gas and oil engine power, a still further reduction in cost, which will accelerate the work of electrifying existing railways. "63. One important aspect of this great question will engage the thoughtful consideration of every government, namely, the military necessity for uniform railway equipment in time of war.

"66. In conclusion, I can only repeat and earnestly recommend to the serious consideration of railway engineers and those in authority the pressing need of determining the system which admits of a prompt selection of those standards of electrification which will render possible a complete interchange of traffic in order to save expense in the future and to avoid difficulties and delays certain to arise unless some common understanding is arrived at very shortly."

It would almost seem that Mr. Westinghouse, when he made his speech in London, in 1910, on the Standardization of Electricity for R. R.'s, that the Ewbank System was in his brain, for many parts of this paper describe the Ewbank Seif-Contained Gas Electric Control.

The Ewbank Self-Contained Gas Electric Control.

The Ewbank Self-Contained Gas Electric Locomotive, with its Multiple Unit System, would do all that westinghouse says should be done.

This being the fact, what does this great invention mean, and what is its immense future? The tests that is Locomotive has been put to in regular service of thousands on thousands of miles, with a cost of frem 1-10 cents per mile for fued, with trailer of $2,000 lbs. to 2½ per car mile running up a mountain itself. Pulling on a level two 200-ton locomotives, 400 tons, and itself 55 tons, 455 tons, taking only 50 H. P. move this immense load.

Remember, this system is for Motor Trucks, Fire Apparatus, Street Cars, Motor Boats, and whereever a steam engine is used for propelling power it can be used. Mr. E. H. Harriman said the time would come when electricity would supplant steam as motive power on all railroads, and that the investor who comes in at the beginning would be the one who received the greatest returns. The late Mr. RICHARD WILSON, in a letter to Dr. H. B. Ewbank, dated Los Angeles, Cal., Jan. 28th, 1813, said regarding the Ewbank Motor Car, No. 333:

"As I have said many times before, and still say, I believe it to be a winner. I have no doubt that when the car is out of the shop and on the rails, those good people that had doubts that the wheels would not turn will feel very much disappointed that they did not have more confidence in your son's statements in regard to his ability to build a car to take the place of the present street railway cars, besides entering into many other lines of transportation. I wish your son every success in his inventions."

As soon as the Multiple Unit System has been tried out, which will be in a few months' time, when trailers are ready, the LAST NUT WILL BE CRACKED and those who have the ability to follow the above men in forecasting the future, first of the great need of such an invention, then turn to the RECORDS OF THE EWBANK Locomotive No. 333, and they can't help from saying, THIS FILLS THE BILL. The president of the Ewbank Electric Trans. Co., Mr. S. M. Mears, who is a practical man, feels that this system will do what Mr. Westinghouse desired to see brought about. Mr. W. H. Hurlbert, an old experienced railroad man, says that he feels that the inventor is going to make good. What does the Westinghouse Air Brake mean to railroading? Mr. Westinghouse offered to a gentleman in Baltimore, the gentleman told the writer, way back in the early history of his brake, before one was out in use, he offered to sell one-half interest in the invention for $5000. Now it is worth hundreds of

The Clothes We Feature

It is unnecessary to point out the new style touches of grace and refinement, because he sees them at a glance, and they are the little things upon which the entire style effect depends, and which appeals to him instantly, as he knows what's right in clothes.
