CAPTAIN JACKSON IS KILLED BY FALL

Thrown From Mount During Drill Portland Officer Dies at Laredo.

SERVICE IS DISTINGUISHED

Enlistment at Outbreak of Spanish War Followed With Commission and Post in Regular Army Given as Bravery Reward.

Captain Rhees Jackson, of Portland son of Colonel James Jackson. United States Army, retired, died yesterday at Laredo. Tex., as a result of being thrown from his mount while at drill. The accident occurred in the morning and death came at 3 P. M., word being received at the home of Colonel Jackson in Portland late yesterday. Captain Jackson was a member of Company H, Ninth Infantry, serving at Laredo. He was recognized as one of the foremost military tacticians in the Army, and though not a West Point graduate, enjoyed a rare distinction in Army circles. Captain Jackson began his Army career at the outbreak of the Spanish-American War, enlisting with the Second Oregon, United States Infantry, and was appointed First Lieutenant when the regiment was mustered into service at Portland May 13, 1898. He was detailed as adjutant of the Third Battallon under Major Phil G. Eastwick. He was with the Oregon volunteers in all engagements in which the Third Battallon participated. He the Third Battallon participated. He returned to the United States in July, 1899, and the regiment was mustered out at San Francisco.

Because of bravery and skill dis-played during the war Captain Jackson was commissioned a Lieutenant in the Regular Army and assigned to the Twelfth Infantry, August 28, 1899. Captain Jackson, who as a boy was proficient in Army military training

Captain Jackson, who as a boy was proficient in Army military training because of his Army surroundings with his father, soon won his spurs in the eyes of United States Army officials, and because of his linguistic abilities, was made head of the Spanish department of military art at Fort Leavenworth. He held this office for two years. At various times also he was dispatched to training camps to serve as military umpire. He was a graduate of both the line and staff schools at Fort Leavenworth, Kan., and went to Texas at the outbreak of the Mexican Texas at the outbreak of the Mexican Captain Jackson is survived by his widow, who was formerly a Philadel-phia belle, one daughter, Mary Eliza-beth, aged 5; his father, Colonel Jack-son, for years Inspector-General of the Oregon National Guard; a sister, Ma-rion Jackson, a Portland artist, and among others, Attorney R. W. Montague, of Portland, an uncle.

Captain Jackson was born at Fort
Klamath, Or., March 12, 1878. The body will be brought to Portland, seph Berger, proprietor of the Diamond Palace at 324 Washington street, and his clerk, Harry L. Depp, the details of which the kept secret by the details of Pepp, against whom he had preferred charges of robbery Saturday.

Berger and Depp were locked in a small room on the third floor of the police station, a room reserved for such purposes. Detectives Hellyer and Tackaberry secreted themselves, and declare they overheard the conversation. From information thus gained, Hellyer and Tackaberry are working on the theory that Berger and Depp both know more about the alleged robbery than they have disclosed.

"We received information vesterday that Berger feared an attachment on his stock from a San Francisco merchant," said Detective Hellyer, "and, working on this theory, we discovered working on this theory, we discovered to the blues and greens of Oregon, as does "Mountains and Hills," and working on this theory, we discovered to the blues and greens of Oregon, as does "Mountains and Hills," and working in their respective rooms in the least interview of the coming season. "We received information yesterday that Berger feared an attachment on his stock from a San Francisco merchant," said Detective Hellyer, "and, working on this theory, we discovered that about ten days previous to the purported robbery, Berger packed a sultcase with valuable diamonds, watches and jewelry. He took two revolvers and the sultcase to Depp's rooms on Stark street, where he left them. Berger admits this.

"Mrs. Depp and her husband concur in admitting that when the suitcase and the revolvers were brought into the rooms, Depp said to his wife: This suitcase contains all Mr. Berger's valuable stock. Here are two revolvers, shoot the first man that comes through that door, whether he is an officer or not."

"Three or four days later the jewelry was taken to a hotel here, where Berger registered under an assumed name and guarded the jewelry. Later he took the jewelry back to the store."

Berger received an unsigned letter from Vancouver. Wash, yesterday which read: "Goods will be returned if charges are dropped. Answer through the press." The detectives say they will not take any action on the letter.

An interesting new feature at the Museum of Art is an exhibition which opened yesterday of paintings and drawings by Miss Clara J. Stephens, a well-known Portland artist who has spent the last two Summers in Italy and at Carmel-by-the Sea, painting with William M. Chase.

Prominently alread wearily but patiently "Indian cavalry regiments have been brought to the front," he explained. "They have peculiar methods. They use a large disc with a big hole in the center, and edges sharpened like a razor. They twirl this disc on a stick as they charge. They can throw the disc a long distance, and wherever it strikes it cuts. They are formidable fighters."
