POLITICS.

Politics is one of the most ancient games known to man. Like poker, its origin is "lost in the mists of antiquity." Search the records as you will gentle reader, and you will find that men have always played it. A cuneiform brick was recently exhumed near Ninevah, the w. k. city of ancient Asia, and on it were some characters that led the Yale professors who found it to decide that it was a campaign speech. They decifered "liar" and "thier" in several places, and by filling in the blank spaces appropriately they were able to show that the speech referred to an irrigation contract on the Euphrates River, graft being alleged.

It was the same, we are told, in Egypt. Many of the papyrifound in the pyramids scathingly refer to the political and personal records of the men who office.

Politics is believed by scientists to have been the mother of art for some of the pictures. POLITICS.

Politics is believed by scientists to have been the mother of art, for some of the pictures scratched on the walls of the caves of the cliff-dwellers are such as to indicate that they served the purpose of political cartoons in those good old pioneer days.

Women have been concerned in politics since the carliest times. Of this archaeologists are certain, and they also believe that they possessed the ballot up to the time that the present voting system came into use. That is, when all voting was done dy direct action, a woman's vote was as good as a man's.

This must have made Pilocene politics very lively.

county club, with branch clubs in Carlton, Newberg and other cities. The officers of the county organization are Mrs. Martin Miller, president; Mrs. J. G. Eckman, secretary, and Mrs. C. F. Daniels, assistant secretary. The parent organization designated Mrs. Queen Dennis, president of the Carlton Club and Mrs. Catherine Cooper as secretary; and for Newberg, Mrs. Clarence Butt, president, and Mrs. Ella Kelty, secretary.

Steps were taken Saturday by the Republican county central committee of Marion County to assist the Republican women to form a woman's auxiliary in that county. There will be a county advisory committee of five women similar to the advisory committee and this committee will work up an organization in every precinct in the county.

Mr. West condemned Dr. Withycombe, Senator Booth, State Treasurer Kay, C. N. McArthur and The Oregonian, distributing his distribes with absolute impartiality through a two-hour speech. He dragged dead men from their shrouds and put words of hearsay into their mouths to defame the living.

Startling Statistics From Salem.
SALEM, Or., Sept. 20.—(Craw. Special.)—George E. Waters, w. k. tobacco jobber, says there are 65 spits to a chew of Star. George has been in the game since Keno was a pup and he ought to know. He has also been trustee of the Salem Elks' lodge since the state House was built and can remember when young Edgar Piper played the tuba in the Home Amusement Harmony Band here. Them were the days, Geo, says, the Republican candidates. But the high-tide in the Governor's speech came near the close, when he was discussing the problem of caring for the unemployed. The speaker admitted that he did not know the solution, but he said that if he had enough money he would give all the idle man money he would give all the idle men in Oregon jobs this Winter.

Referring to his plan to have the state do this, Mr. West said that he was criticised by The Oregonian last Winter when he came from Salem to Portland to see what he could do to Seen on the McKenzie.

Oregonian for fuel."

Mr. West opened his speech by an elaborate and intricate defense of his prison policy. He followed this with an attack on State Treasurer Kay, to whom "reactionary" was the mildest epithet applied. Then C. N. McArthur was reviled as turncoat Democrat, who "had never done a day's work in his life." Next came Gus Moser, on whom the Governor's attacks were purely personal. Lair Thompson, of Lakeview, also came in for a few rapid and rabid

The Governor also came in for a few rapid and rabid remarks.

Skipping rapidly from name to name, and leaving a trail of vituperation in his wake, Mr. West came to R. A. Booth, Republican candidate for the United States Senate. Mr. Booth was criticised because of having made money to protect the state printing graft," he said. "Baker sont work to The Oregonian at Portland, and the first occasion on which women have criticised because of having made money to protect the state printing graft," he said. Mr. West defended his use of the veto and declared against Dr. Withycombe's proposed policy of harmony between the Governor and the Legislature.

"I am going to be among the unemployed myself soon," said Mr. West, in closing. "I believe that every man has a God-given right to work and to eat, and my wife and kids are going to eat."
