Not necessary to wet the hair. Rub the solution in with the ends of the fingers.

Rev. Fredrick K. Howard, of the Episcopal Social Service League, will suggest a motto for the club.

Picking of the nose is rarely a sign of the presence of worms.

How Joel and Amos Found a Home.—Part Two. Old Pumpkin Head sat at the top of the big hole with the whip in his hand.

When morning came the boys were taken out and carried back to the room where they had eaten the night before.

When they were eating their dinner Joel asked why they were all carried down the stairs.

"He is afraid we will discover his cross," replied one of the boys.

"I don't know," replied the boy, "but we think he is afraid of someone."

Old Pumpkin Head came in just then and Joel and Amos learned no more that day about their strange home and master.

The digging and the sleeping went on the same that day and the next, but Amos and Joel, who were working side by side, felt their shovels strike something on the third day.

"I think I've found it," cried old Pumpkin Head, and taking two boys at a time in his great hands he took them out of the hole and climbed out after them.

He would not leave one of them there while he carried the others upstairs this time, but drove them in front of him with his whip so fast their feet scarcely touched the stairs.

But this time they did not go into the room where they ate. He drove them in another direction and opened an iron door.

After waiting all one day, Joel proposed that one boy stand on the shoulders of another.

The boys went into the room, and the door closed after them with a bang, and they found themselves in a room of stone, with only one window, and that so high they could not reach it.

They waited for a day, and then they found themselves in a room of stone, with only one window, and that so high they could not reach it.

even by one boy standing on the shoulders of another, and a third boy climb up on the shoulders of the second and look out and call for old Pumpkin Head.

"I see it all," said one boy. Old Pumpkin Head found the treasure he made us dig for, and he did not want us any more, so he put us in here to starve, and that is what we are doing now."

Old Pumpkin Head would have thought to look like granite, but he thought the bars but we would fall to the ground and be killed. No, there is another way that is safer if we only had a knife or a piece of iron."

"That is so," said one of the boys. But you may be sure we are high up. Old Pumpkin Head would have thought to look like granite, but he thought the bars but we would fall to the ground and be killed.

"I think one of us could squeeze through the bars if we knew how high we were."
