

WHISKY CASES BRING TO RED WITNESSES

Indians Called to Testify in Trials Over Liquor at Bottom of Inquiry.

ONE OF THREE INDICTED

Federal Grand Jury Returns 16 Indictments, Three of Which Are Not Announced—Three Held Under Mann Act.

Three of the 34 cases that came before the Federal grand jury that adjourned yesterday originated because of the presence in Portland of Indian witnesses in cases involving the selling of liquor to Indians. A true bill was returned in one of the three cases, George Brown, a bartender, being indicted for selling whisky to Miller Brown, George Merritt and Floyd Brown, Klamath Indians, September 23.

Not true bills were returned in the cases of John Erickson, accused of selling whisky to the Indians in Portland, and Cain Scouchin, an Indian, arrested on a similar charge.

The Indians named in the indictment against George Brown came to Portland as witnesses in the case of Ed Challequin, who was indicted for his alleged attack on Floyd Brown, another Indian of the same tribe, with a knife on the Klamath reservation June 30.

Two Too Drunk to Testify. When Floyd Brown and Miller George were called before the grand jury they were found to be too drunk to testify. The grand jury sent them to the House of Correction, where they were held until they were sober enough to testify. Deputy United States Marshal MacSwain made an investigation, resulting in the arrest of George Brown and John Erickson, Brown being indicted.

Of the 16 indictments, three were secret. The other indictments are: Julia Lockett, of Medford, indicted for perjury in having sworn that she had not been married since the death of her husband, James Jackson, who was a soldier in the United States Army. She made false oath in applying for a pension as a soldier's widow. It is charged, and which she admitted, that she had been married to John Lockett after Jackson's death, said she had "clear forgot about that marriage."

Nathan Schneiders, Nick Campagni and Charles H. Fenton were indicted for alleged violation of the Mann white slave act. Roy Speer was indicted for perjury. It is alleged that he swore falsely at a Commissioner's hearing, where he was charged with violation of the Mann act in saying that he had not been in The Dalles since 1905 and had never been in Pendleton.

Liquor Charges Against Five. Louis Hutchinson and John Lowe were indicted, charged with bringing alcohol and whisky into the Umatilla Indian reservation. A Payant with selling whisky to Umatilla Indians and G. Farquharson and R. C. Alexander with taking liquor to the Warm Springs reservation.

Leo Ling and Chew Sin, of Portland, and Ah Sung, of Astoria, were indicted on charges of having had opium in their possession.

Besides a new true bill in the local Indian liquor cases of John Erickson and Cain Scouchin, not true bills were returned in the cases of Ah Chung and Ah John, accused of having had opium; G. H. Davis, accused of taking liquor into the Umatilla reservation; John Watson and A. H. Decatur, accused of taking liquor into the Klamath reservation, and Michael Schuh, a former member of the local National Guard organization, charged with a military overcoat and hat from the Army.

There remain about 50 cases for the November grand jury to consider.

OREGONIANS SEE BATTLE

CARL GERLINGER, OF DALLAS, AND FAMILY BACK FROM WAR.

Tourists but Six Miles From Firing Line at Sarzhorg—Thousands of Dead Piled in Grove.

Carl Gerlinger, of Dallas, a nephew of Louis Gerlinger, Sr., of Portland, returned to Portland Sunday night from Germany. He is the first to bring firsthand observations of the European battlefields, after an engagement of the present war.

Mr. Gerlinger visited the battlefield of Sarzhorg just after the battle and saw several thousand French and German dead, a number which, to him, he said, seemed like 20,000 or more, and was so reported at the time. During the battle Mr. Gerlinger and his family were only six miles from the firing line and could see the battle.

With Mr. Gerlinger were his wife and four children, Mrs. Gerlinger and child, Mrs. Joseph Glad, of Dallas, Miss Sophie Bankauer, of New-York, a sister of Mr. Gerlinger, and Miss Ottilie Drexler, of Stundweiler, Germany, who has come to reside with her uncle, F. H. Drexler, of Independence, at least until the war is over.

It took the party three days and nights to reach Rotterdam from Sarzhorg and then they were forced to take steamer to get to America. They arrived in New York last Monday. The Gerlingers left for Europe in May and, having toured all through France and Germany, expected to leave for home August 6, but the war interfered with their plans.

"Two days after the battle I went over the field near Sarzhorg, and it appeared to me that I saw the bodies of 50,000 dead Germans and 60,000 dead French stacked up in heaps," said Mr. Gerlinger last night at the Perkins Hotel. "The bodies were so thick that most of them were leaning against others without touching the ground. The French had fought from a grove and the trees had been cut down as cleanly as if by the use of axes. French were the bodies of the dead Frenchmen. We were six miles from the battlefield when the struggle occurred and could see the firing plainly."

"Conditions are certainly bad in Germany. All men between 17 and 45 have already been pulled out and they are now talking of mustering all men between 45 and 50 years of age. The train service in Germany is shot all to pieces and they are short on many essentials. We were treated considerably, but the fact that this was the only man in a party of six adults and five children made it rather difficult for us to get about."

"I also saw the battlefield of Meuselhausen. While the battles were in progress a constant noise prevailed which sounded much like thunder."

Druggist Fills 40 Whisky Prescriptions for "Patient" in 10 Weeks.

COQUILLE, Or., Sept. 28.—(Special.)—The grand jury here returned eight indictments Saturday. The names have not been made public, though liquor sales at the dry town of Myrtle Point are supposed to be the basis. Druggists were subpoenaed from there who had filled prescriptions for whisky by the thousand, and in every case the physician's fee for writing them was $1. They simply called for "Sp. Frumentil," in quantities of one quart, and the dose was three teaspoonfuls a day. One patient had paid for 40 prescriptions in ten weeks.

Ten days before the fair opened Pleasant Valley Grange, he said, had made no preparations for the exhibit, and some wanted to abandon the effort to have an exhibit, said Mr. Sager, but a few determined to go ahead, with the result that the Grange secured the second prize. Mr. Sager complimented the committee for its work, and congratulated the Grange on its success. Master Henderson accepted the badge in behalf of the Grange. A programme prepared by Mrs. H. W. Smashall was rendered.
