FOUR BRAVES ARE FROM NORTHWEST

Leading Pitcher of Pennant Winners Rube Kid at Seattle Two Years Ago.

EX-PORTLANDER ON TEAM

Statistics Indicate Boston's Chance Against Athletics Should Be Slight, but in Reality Club Discredits Dope.

Northwestern ball fans will welcome the pennant ambitions of the Boston braves this Fall with particular warmth. Four of those instrumental in landing the flag hall from the North-west League and one of them, Bill James, of Seattle, leads the team pitchers with 23 wins and six defeats. James was a big rube kid when he broke in at Seattle two years ago.

The other Northwesterners are Bert Whaling, catcher, formerly of Portland; Outfielder Mann and Pitcher Paul Strand. James and Mann played with Seattle, and Strand with both the San Francisco and the Spokane In-Francisco and the Spokane In-

Two other Northwestern Leaguers, First Baseban Myers, of Spokane, and Wynn Noyes, of Spokane, a pitcher, were taken by Boston in the same haul, but both were sent back. Myers refused to play in the International League and is now a Federal, while Noyes is back in Spokane.

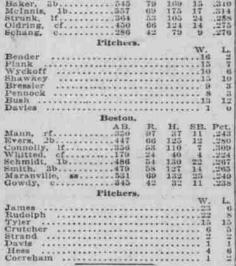

Dope Against Braves. Dope is a most peculiar thing, more It turns and bites its masters at the slightest provocation. But neverthe-less in the dope the Braves do not fig-ure even as good as 4 to 5 safe wagers. In batting they appear puny beside the Athletics great hitting trio, Baker-Collins-McInnes: in fact, Connolly is the only .300 hitter in the bunch. The teams rank about on a par in the field, but the Athletics have it all over them on the bases.

In stern reality the Braves are a baffling mystery. Aside from the pitching statistics, there is little in the figures to explain their remarkable rise from the cellar to first place.
