McCutcheon Tells How Military Passes Were Ignored by Civil Officers.

Train Makes 25 Miles in Night. Soon after daylight the train ran into Charleroi, barely 25 miles from Beaumont.

Landwehr Regiments Pass. For six hours we lay at Gembloux. Our breakfast had consisted of rye bread, some honey and a bottle of Bordeaux.

These regiments are composed of older men who are called to the colors after the regulars and reserves have gone out. These soldiers were now being sent to do garrison and police duty in Belgium.

Every man of them seemed especially eager to see the military prisoners. For the French they appeared to have only a casual interest, but we could constantly hear the inquiries about the English.

It was an ancient and honored custom among the people. Whenever a new house is built a branch of a tree is nailed to the tree in honor of the completion of the house.

Upon the sides of the cars were hundreds of inscriptions, written with chalk. Most were humorous and some were illustrated with rough sketches representing victorious German soldiers doing various things to the French, English and Russians.

Belgian Atrocities Exaggerated. Our little group of civilians in the last car was regarded with intense interest by the men on the troop trains.

While we waited we saw three priests and a considerable number of Belgians. We were supposed to be English spies and the scrutiny that we got was most unpleasant.

troops were marching up from the direction of the frontier. The Kaiser halted and addressed a fervently patriotic oration to one regiment and another to a second regiment.

On this particular occasion the Kaiser had been sleeping in a French chalet, but not without elaborate precautions against surprise or attack. The extraordinary measures taken to guard him must be attributed not so much to personal cowardice as to his profound conviction that his safety is essential to the fatherland.

The French chalet was fortified against aerial attacks. Sacks were piled on the roof and a protective shield of metal network was erected. Whenever the Kaiser moves his quarters a small army of military engineers precedes him to carry out these defensive measures before his arrival.

Around the chalet were men of his special bodyguard, one detachment of which was in the kitchen and another in the hall, another at the front door and two more in rooms immediately above and beneath his own.

Three unbroken lines of sentries surrounded the house, and a whole battalion of infantry and several squadrons of cavalry were encamped in the park. This was some 50 miles from the front, and the chalet was connected by field telegraph with the headquarters of the nearest German army.

It was evident that the secret police were watching us and that trouble was brewing. The American Consul was in Liege on business and his vice-consul made most of his inquiries.

BRITAIN PATROLS PACIFIC

NEW CRUISER NOW REPORTED OFF COAST OF MEXICO. Naval Forces Are Believed to Have Been Strengthened From Asiatic or Australian Stations.

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 9.—The British steamer Strathdene, from Callao, which arrived here today, reported that off the coast of Mexico, on September 29, a British cruiser fired a shot across her bows.

CAPTAIN MAY BE VIOLATOR

Explanation of Reported Criticism of Germany Likely to Be Ordered. WASHINGTON, Oct. 9.—Prompt explanation of statements credited to him in newspaper reports today concerning German military movements and alleged atrocities by German soldiers will be demanded of Captain Leverett Coleman, United States Army, in the opinion of War Department officials.

ANTWERP REFUSES TO BURN MUNITIONS

Suggestion Made by Germany That Activities Cease Is Met With Sortie. REFUGEES SPREAD TERROR

Whatever German Shells Strike Is Destroyed—Fort Kessel Succeeds in Inflicting Heavy Damage on Enemy.

LONDON, Oct. 9.—The correspondent of the Post, in describing the events preceding the bombardment, says: "About a month ago the German commandos began to realize the danger of having the Belgian army occupying a fortified position which continually threatened the German lines of communication."

"Lunch was taken in the open air at a table in front of certain Generals' tents. Wine and food, commandeered from the residence of a French country gentleman, supplied the Kaiser with a luxurious meal prepared by his own cook and served by his attendants in gorgeously striped uniforms. None of the pomp of the Imperial court was forgotten at the front."

"More visits were made to troops and more speeches were delivered the afternoon. Then the Kaiser went back by automobile to the chalet for dinner. At no moment during the day had he been within range of the enemy's fire."

"On Saturday the situation showed a slight advance by the Belgians and on Sunday the German attack seemed to be slackening in its intensity. On Monday the German artillery put a furious attack on Lierre and the City Council urged the Governor to continue the defenses of the city without regard to property interests."

"On Tuesday there were further attacks on Lierre and at one point the Germans got a handful of men across the river by swimming, but they were covered over only to be killed. The German artillery attack was rather diffuse and the position was checked at nightfall, though savage fighting continued at Lierre."

Lipman Wolfe & Co Merchandise of Merit Only

Men's Durward Topcoats

It is generally conceded that in topcoats there is more good style in London makes than in any made over here. They fit, but they never bind. They always drape gracefully no matter how much spare cloth there may be over chest and back.

Pockets are capacious for use and a pouch and pipe in one of them won't alter the good lines. And whatever anyone may say, the cloth is the sturdiest in the world—stoutly woven, dyed in the yarn, in shades and mixtures that indicate an admirable unconcern of conventions.

Individuality—that's Kenneth Durward. Incidentally, these top coats, hand-tailored expressly for the Lipman, Wolfe & Co. men's shop in several styles for town and automobile wear, are priced materially lower than heretofore.
