the little theater when other programmes are not in seasion, and these and vaudeville "stunte" serve to keep "something doing every minute" for the amusement of visitors. Among the exhibits the crowds swept hither and thither all day long, attracted from one to another by noise or brilliancy, and every visitor gathered as he passed from booth to booth an increasing armful of cards, samples, posters and souvenirs. The first thing one encounters as he enters the main half is the demonstrator in Albers Milling Company's booth, ready and eager to serve him a pancake, and as he advances through the maze of booths a whole world of sandwiches and sausages and cookies and cakes and cider in opened up to him. WOMAN APPEALS FOR NORMAL SCHOOLS TAX LEVY

Mrs. Lowell Says Distances in Oregon Justify Expenditures at Weston and Ashland

(Eva P. Lowell, in Sunday Oregonian.)
FOREST GROVE, Or., Oct. 23.—(To the Editor.)—May I add a word, among the many, to enlist the sympathy and the votes of the people of Portland and the great Willamette Valley, in the effort which the citizens of Eastern and Southern Oregon are making to re-establish the normal schools at Weston and Ashland? My home is in Pendleton, and I know the needs of the great interior counties in the matter of trained teachers. I am sure that the southern counties are in the same situation. It is nearly 200 miles from my home city to Monmouth, and about the same distance from Monmouth to Medford. Is it not unreasonable to expect that teachers can afford to travel that distance in any considerable numbers to seek special training? Yet, Pendleton and Medford are near neighbors to Monmouth when one considers counties like Malheur and Lake, and their distance from the one school now maintained. I want to make special appeal to the supporters of the many colleges in the counties from Lane to Mulinomah to raily to the two initiative measures restoring the Eastern Oregon State Normal and the Southern Oregon State Normal. The added tax is a mere bagatelle. If we are to maintain a public school system, we must prepare teachers therefor. The demand of the age is for trained men and women. No money thus expended is wasted. The better the public schools the more of the young people will take college courses, and the colleges thereby reap the reward ultimately.

They will be just to Eastern Oregon by restoring its only state school and authorizing the use of its $75,000 state school plant. They will be just to their children and fair to all Oregon by voting to revive, not only one, but both of the state's Normal Schools, unwisely abandoned by the Senate in 1909.

An enlightened self-interest demands that Oregon maintain three Normal Schools. California has eight and Washington three, and have never questioned their value. Should Oregon content herself with one only, when more than 1000 teachers are needed annually in its public schools?

Remember that the Eastern Oregon Normal will cost the taxpayer but 21/2 cents on each $1000 of his taxable property, and when restored will be taken out of politics.

NORMAL SCHOOLS ON NEW BASIS

Some of Most Important Differences Outlined by Supporter

(Henry D. Sheldon in Morning Oregonian.)
PORTLAND, Or., Oct. 22.—(To the Editor.)
—The attention of the voters of the state should be called to the fact that the normal schools, if re-established, will be on an entirely new basis of efficiency as compared with the old schools of 10 years ago. Some of the most important differences are the following:

First, the new schools will be under the entire control of the General State Normal School Board. Consequently, there will be no possible lowering of standards to attract large numbers of students who have no intention of teaching for the purpose of boosting business in the particular towns where the normal schools are located. The present State Board has made a distinct success in its administration of the existing Normal School at Monmouth, which has attained a standard of effectiveness comparing favorably with normal schools in other states. There is no reason to believe that its policy would be any leas effective if normal schools were established in Southern and Eastern Oregon.

Another point of importance is the millage tax, voted by the people themselves, which takes the entire question out of the legislative arena. The new normal schools will have no occasion to appeal to the Legislature for financial support, and, therefore, can in no possible way interfere with general legislation.

A third factor to be considered is the change of attitude in regard to general high school education. The old normal schools provided this for their localities. At Monmouth the high school education is now provided for in a separate institution supported by the Monmouth district, and is in no way a charge on the taxpayers of the state. Ashland possesses one of the state. Ashland possesses one of the stonegest high schools in the state, and is in an admirable position to train the future teachers along general lines, thus relegating to the normal school only the purely professional work. Undoubtedly a similar provision is in view at Weston. This insures that the state money be spent wholly for the professional training of teachers.

The value of dividing the state support between three schools may be questioned by some. There are, in the main, two reasons favoring such a division. First, throughout the United States, experience has shown that the students of a normal school are very largely recruited from the immediate region where the school is located. Ordinarily, normal school students do not go more than 100 miles away from home to secure professional training. In Michigan, where sev-

160 miles away from home to secure pro-fessional training. In Michigan, where sev-eral years ago a number of new normal schools were added to the system, these schools secured a large constituency in their respective districts without in any way cutting off the support of the large central school in Ypsilanti.

A powerful factor in securing efficiency

A powerful factor in securing efficiency in the training of teachers is the presence of large opportunities in the way of practice facilities for teachers. While the work in methods and professional subjects like psychology, school hygiene and child study is valuable, after all the average teacher learns most through imitation and suggestion as well as practice. Every normal school needs, therefore, not only some model classes in its neighborhood, but a considerable number of other closses where the young teachers may do apprenticeship work. A town of ordinary size can only offer a young teachers may do apprenticeship work. A town of ordinary size can only offer a certain number of such openings. As a consequence, when huge normal schools have been located in small towns, as has been the case in several states of the Middle West, the practice facilities have been altogether inadequate and the teachers have been only partially trained. It is, therefore, advisable in Oregon that we have a number of normal schools which will attract the teachers of the three main geographical divisions of the state and which can at the same time give the necessary opportunities for efficient work. for efficient work.
