FOR the first time in the history of the Monday Musical Club, the programme included dancing yesterday afternoon at their meeting in Christensen's Hall. The intimate relation of music and the dance was spoken on at length, first, by the president of the club, Mrs. G. J. Frankel, who introduced the chairman of the afternoon, Mrs. Russell, who in turn introduced M. Christensen, who is not only a musician but also an exponent of the modern dance.

Mr. Christensen's talk was chiefly on the important part dancing always has played in music. He stated: "It is becoming rapidly a high art and is ranked with music, sculpture, painting and all the finer arts. Even in civilized nations, the rhythm of motion portrays the moods of the individuals, and the dance movement is prominently felt in symphony music."

Miss Georgia Way also gave an interesting talk on the dance and its relation to music, explaining the methods of training dancers in Russia, the country that has produced the greatest artists in the dancing world. "Dancing," stated Miss Way, "is one of the main factors in the education and culture of the human race."

She dealt particularly with the tendency of modern dancing towards the aesthetic, and illustrated by giving the "Pierrot Gavotte" with Robert Krohn as partner. It is a beautiful dance, exquisitely graceful and full of poetical motion.

The piece de resistance of the programme was the marvelous interpretative dancing by little 11-year-old Mildred Keats, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry L. Keats. Her little body frocked with white chiffon, her little body wreathed with garlands of pink rosebuds, she came in like a breath of summer and danced the "Cycle of the Seasons," a Greek interpretative dance by Louis Chalif. Her portrayal of "The Joy of the Rose," a Pierrot pantomimic dance, was beautiful and winning, and won the hearts of the assemblage.

She is not only a graceful and wonderful dancer, but a natural actress, beautiful and exquisite, her little arms expressing her dances in a remarkable manner. She wore a chic little white satin Pierrot costume with huge black pompons. Her closing dance was Petite Coquette, an aesthetic dance arranged by Chalif. She was fascinating and irresistible, her costume being of the Colonial period; a white satin with pinnars and wattleau pleat of pink brocade satin.

As an encore after the "Cycle of the Seasons," Miss Keats gave "Barcarole" from the "Tales of Hoffman." It is a dreamy, languorous dance, and the little artist handled it superbly, expressing every tone of the beautiful number with wonderful grace and artistry.

Miss Katherine Ensey, who was to have given two vocal solos, was ill and unable to be present. Mrs. Dorr advocated the teaching of dancing in high schools as a necessary part of education, and gave an interesting talk on music.

Mrs. Keats at the piano, Mr. Christensen at the organ, and the members of the Monday Musical Club gave them a rising vote of appreciation for their services.

WHEN SHE SEES WHAT SHE WANTS SHE BUYS IT

And She ISN'T Rich!

Yesterday she saw a suit—one of those popular military styles. You've seen them—trimmed with fur. The prettiest thing—in tete de negre shade. CHERY'S has them in different fashionable shades—blue and Russian green, you know, and all the rest.

But, of course, you want to know HOW she "gets what she wants when she wants it." SHE BUYS HER CLOTHES ON CREDIT. That's all there is to it. If you think it over you'll find it solves a whole lot of problems and just smoothes away the worry wrinkles like a charm.

Oh, there are hundreds of girls and hundreds of men and hundreds of women of refined, particular tastes that positively "dote" on CHERY'S magnificent styles.

So don't say, "Lucky, lucky woman!" the NEXT time you see the kind of clothes YOU want on someone else. Buy them for yourself—at CHERY'S. Their store is in the Fitzlock block, 355-361 Washington street.

Have You the Hair of a Musician?

Bald or thin-haired musicians are unknown. This same may be said of actors. The reason is that constant appearance before the public makes constant care of appearance a habit. A constant care of hair insures a heavy, attractive growth. In cleansing the hair it is not advisable to use a makeshift, but always use a preparation made for shampooing on the scalp. You can enjoy the best that is known for about three cents a shampoo by getting a package of canthrox from your drugist; dissolve a teaspoonful in a cup of hot water and your shampoo is ready. After its use the hair dries rapidly with uniform color. Dandruff, excess oil and dirt are dissolved and entirely disappear. Your hair will be so fluffy that it will look much heavier than it is. Its luster and softness will also delight you, while the stimulated scalp gains the health which insures hair growth. Adv.

Vegetable Lore.

Cauliflower and Onions—Boil cauliflower and onions in an uncovered saucepan, to make the odor as little apparent in the house as possible. Also leave the kitchen window open for a few inches. This method of ventilating carries off much of the odor.

Lettuce—Lettuce should be thoroughly washed the minute it is received in the kitchen. It can be satisfactorily cleaned in several bowls of water or else under running water. Then it should be carefully wrapped in a wet, clean cloth and put directly on the ice until it is needed.

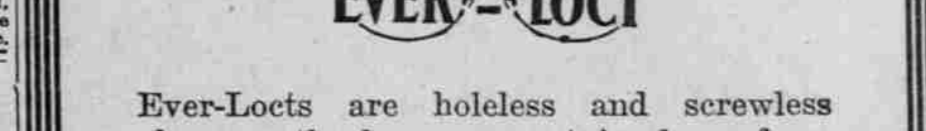

Green Peppers—Remember that sometimes when green peppers are, so far as their flesh goes, perfectly sweet, the seeds are hot. If cooked with the peppers they give an unpleasantly peppery taste to them, so they should always be carefully removed before the peppers are cooked.

Sweet Potatoes—Sweet potatoes are usually rather damp when they are boiled, and are rather therefore much improved by a second cooking. They can be fried in butter, French fried, mashed and made into cakes or croquettes or served in any other of a number of delicious forms.

Celery—When celery is high priced, divide it into two or three parts. The very hearts are for eating, as they are chilled and split, at the table. The neck stalks can be used in salad, or creamed and served hot. The best of flavoring in other soup. Copyright, 1914, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.
