ALLIES' PLAN IS TO WEAR OUT GERMANS

General Joffre Invites Attacks That Sacrifice Foes, Even if Positions Are Lost.

BELGIUM BEST WAR FIELD

Paris Report Says Driving Back of Foes to Home Ground Would Be Advantage to Kaiser-Teutons Outnumbered by 475,000.

PARIS, Oct. 21.—(Correspondence of the Associated Press.)—Precise infor-mation upon the numbers of men enmatton upon the numbers of men engaged in particular actions on any part of the allies' 300-mile battle line in France and Belgium is never known outside of a small group of men, who surround Generall Joffre, the French commander-in-chief. One hears of great battles, of terrific losses, sometimes estimated at 20,000 or 25,000 a day but mithous any accurate news as day, but without any accurate news as to how many men were engaged on either side.

But when it comes to the relative size of the armies something like gen-eral accuracy is obtainable. Compe-tent persons attached to the French War Office estimate that the Germans have about 1.750,000 men in Belgium, in France and along the German fron-tier to Switzerland. The allies un-doubtedly have a numerical superiority. Their forces are estimated at 2,225,000 men on or near the fighting lines.

Defense Overpowers Offense.

One reason why the allies do not turn the Germans out of France and Belgium is that the power of the de-fense is greater with modern weapons and entrenchments than the power of do so. It is simply a question of con-centrating sufficient forces on that inferiority as the weeks go and the war will be lost.

Lives of Men Considered.

General Joffre and Field Marshal French are careful of the lives of their men. They sedk to accomplish large results by letting the Germans attack under unfavorable conditions, when they will do so, and the allied commanders appear to consider that the manders appear to consider that the Germans may be engaged to greater advantage in France and in Belgium than in Germany. The effort is to dispose of the allied troops upon this or that part of the vast front, so that important fractions of the invaders may be destroyed or captured. For the allies simply to drive the Germans before them—if that should be possible—would be to drive them back upon their bases with armies intact. The problem of ceating the Germans on this frontier would be more difficult every

A deep conviction seems to exist at the headquarters in the field and at the headquarters in the field and at the Ministry of War that the war is to be a long one, that the victory is to be won solely by attrition, and that this process of attrition can be applied as well in Northern France and in Belgium as on the Rhine. The profound care of the military administration is not to be extravagant with unreplaceable human material. The look ahead is for a long war-a year or more is for a long war—a year or more—and the men must be kept alive to carry LONELY CAMPS ON SALISBURY

France still has probably 1,500,000 men capable of bearing arms—most of them under arms—who have never been to the front. Young men and the re-serves of the older classes are being trained. France therefore, can lose 500,000 men and yet maintain her gigantic armies at their present strength. The same may be true of Germany— it probably is—and therefore military observers in Paris cannot believe in a short and decisive war. The immense operations which already have taken place are looked upon as merely the beginning, as merely the deployment and opening engagements of war which may not reach its greatest violence un-til Spring.

The strategic value of Borkum Island, which is six miles long and two miles wide, lies in the fact that it commands the estuary of the Ems and might, perhaps, be used as a submarine base and also in the defense of East Frisland, the district of Prussia which forms the northwestern.

A dispatch from Petrograd says the newspapers there report that the cruisers Goeben and Breslau and four Turkish torpedo-boats bombarded the shore near Sebastopol yesterday, shelling the railroad and the docks. The Russian shore batteries replied. The warships retired along the Crimean shore to the east after inflicting trivial damage.

Theodosia, on the Crimean coast, 100 miles northeast of Sebastopol, also surfered a bombardment on Saturday, when a Turkish cruiser sailed close enough to throw 30 shells into the city. News has been received at the Russian foreign office that the Russian Ambassador has left Constantinople, but the Turkish Minister at Petrograd has not yet received his passports or instructions from Constantinople.

Another Petrograd dispatch says a dispatch from Sebastopol reports that the former German cruiser Goeben's bombardment of that Black Sea port was put to an end by the Constanti-nowszawa batteries, which forced the
