Milwaukie Council has prepared an ordinance giving the gas company a franchise with Portland rates of $1 a 1000 cubic feet, which may pass at the Council meeting tonight, but the gas company has refused to give Milwaukie gas for less than $1.25, and hence will go around the town.

PANTAGES ACTS LIVELY. TRAVESTY ON "MOVING DAY" BRIMS WITH HUMOR. "The Great Question" of Big City Is Rival Playlet With Able Cast. Motorcyclist Real Thriller.

Two interesting sketches, a comedy and the presentation of a big city's problem, head the bill that opened at the Pantages yesterday. "Moving Day," a travesty on American customs, brims with humor. It pictures the removal of the family chattel from the former place of residence to the new home and ends with the discovery that the furniture has been taken into the wrong house. Bruce Richardson, as Sam Hill, the family man, is the principal purveyor of humor.

The other playlet, "The Great Question," Landers Stevens, the chief of police of a big city, is faced with the problem of blind reform led by persons not competent to judge the needs of a seaport. The opening number, a tight-wire act of Togan and Geneva, is both original and clever, with a startling climax.

Another musical number is that of the York Trio, two boys and a girl, with good voices and fancy steps. The opening number, a tight-wire act of Togan and Geneva, is both original and clever, with a startling climax. Motorcyclists have something worthy of emulation which they show in shooting corners around the city in the act of Castell, who does the "dip of death" in a cage.

AL FRANKS, LILLIE SUTHERLAND WELCOMED HERE AGAIN. Miss Jeannie Mal as Leading Woman Makes First Appearance Before Portland Playgoers.

When the Lyric Theater presented "Lulu" yesterday afternoon many persons in the audience were present to welcome a new stock company and to greet once more Al Franks and Lillie Sutherland, who were members of the Lyric Stock Company two years ago. Mr. Franks needs no introduction to Portland playgoers. He made his reputation in Los Angeles, where he played eight years in two houses, coming to Portland and sustaining it. Miss Sutherland was a soubrette with Kolb & Dill and has had wide experience.

Miss Jeannie Mal, the leading woman, is seen in stock in Portland for the first time. Her beauty, charm and ability are unquestionable, as applause testified. Ethel Burney, Marie Celestine, who directs a well-chosen chorus of ten girls, and Joe Kemper divided honors equally in the opinion of the spectators. Other girls in the cast were Lou Dunbar, Jack Curtis and William Mansfield, and each fulfilled his part in a most satisfactory manner.

"Lulu" was written and directed by the Lyric stock company and is a well-known popular play introduced. The plot shows a family cut off with barely any money in a will, with the exception of a grandson, who inherits a great deal of money if he does not propose to any woman before 6 o'clock the same night. The group try to have Lou, Miss Mal, enter a plot with the young man, Joe Kemper. This she does, but falling in love, will not allow the young man to prosper until the time is up.

The play has one scene and one act and 11 musical numbers. The chorus girls wear many alluring costumes. The play is laid in Paris.

PROHIBITION EFFECT NOTED. Increased Taxation to Be $1.25 on Each $1000.

The effect prohibition will have on the pocketbooks of the taxpayers of Portland when the state goes dry January 1, 1915, is shown in a statement prepared by the City Auditor's office. It is shown that on each $1000 of assessed valuation in the city there will be a tax of $1.25 to make up the revenue which heretofore has gone to the City Treasury from saloon and liquor licenses. This amount will have to be paid each year after 1915.

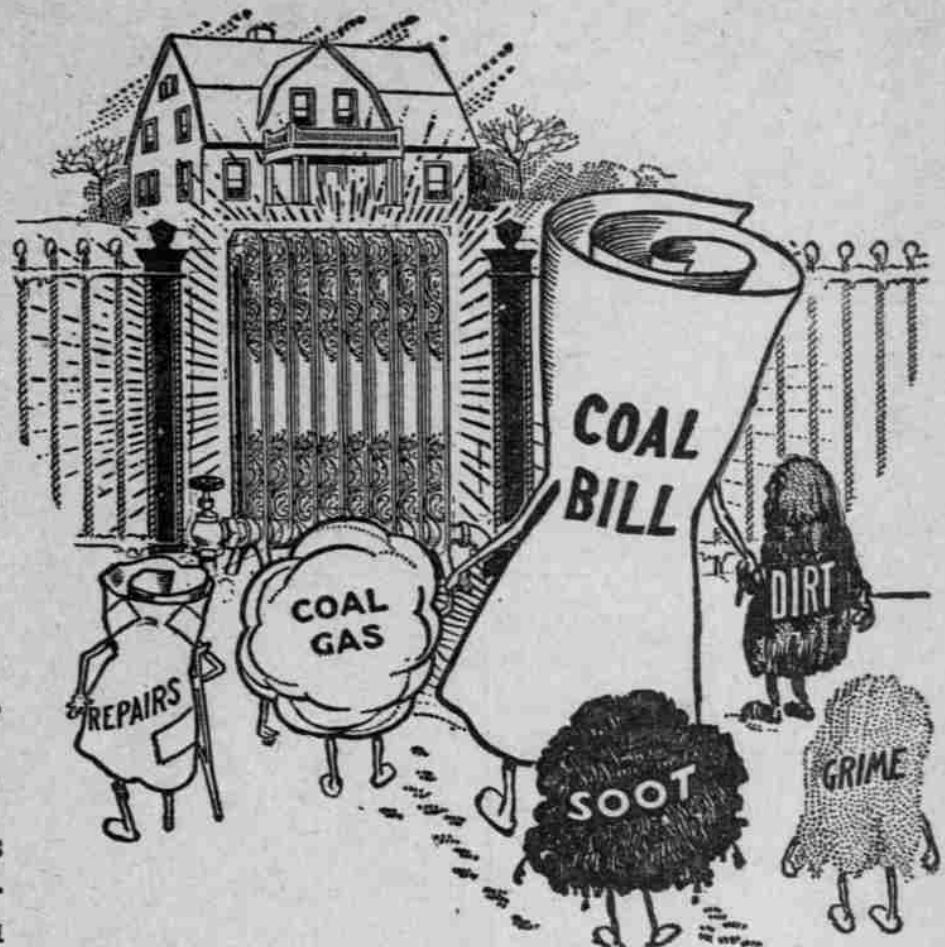

In 1915 the amount will be 50 cents on each $1000 of assessed valuation. The city's assessed valuation is about $314,900,000.

It is estimated that the loss of the saloon revenue will necessitate a levy of a mill and a quarter on all assessed property to make up the difference. This year the saloon revenue has amounted to $372,179, which is somewhat under the usual amount owing to the fact that a number of saloons have been put out of business by Mayor Albee and the City Commission. There are now 385 saloons. At this time last year there were 419.

Alsea and Denger, Or., began in United States District Court before Judge Bean yesterday. The jury disagreed in the first trial. It is charged that Steeprow concealed a large quantity of third-class mail in the barn where he kept his horse at Alsea.

The theory of Assistant United States District Attorney Beckman, who is prosecuting the case, is that Steeprow found the third-class mail, consisting of mail order catalogues, magazines, newspapers and a quantity of Representative LaFerty's speeches, too heavy to carry with comfort. Steeprow is defended by Attorneys McFadden and Wilson, of Corvallis.
