An early morning express service will leave Mount Angel and gather milk, cream and farm produce which will be delivered into Portland every morning and a daily freight service will be maintained. Freight in small quantities now is coming in on the road, but all of the company's equipment is busy hauling gravel from this city to the end of the line for ballast. Two and three trains of eight or 10 cars each carry ballast on the line each day.

Rails are now laid on the line and the track is thoroughly ballasted with river gravel four miles past Molalia. Six passenger cars and other equipment are now is Portland waiting unsult in better results financially. F.

six passenger cars and other equipment are now is Portland waiting until the road is completed.

Depots and electrical substations at Beaver Creek and Monitor are well under way. Crews now are working along the right of way on the larger cuts where there is danger of slides in the rainy season and plies will be driven in several places to make the safety of the track sure.

Over the new line Mount Angel, the terminus, is 30 miles from Oregon City or 43 miles from Portland. Moialia is miles from Portland.

The railroad officials are makins tentative plans for the train service. The passenger service will be equal to any electric road in the state. The best equipped coaches have been obtained and the company is planning to cut the time from Portland and Oregon City to Molalia and Mount Angel under present steam road schedules.

All the addresses were to show how to develop the resources of the Sandy Valley, which, the visitors declared, is one of the promising sections of the state. The guests of the Grange expressed themselves as pleased with the cut the time from Portland and Oregon Sid: "We are holding these institutes often and this was one of the best we have held. The farmers were deeply interested in everything that might help them." All the addresses were to show how
