OREGON GRIDIRON CLASSIC IS TODAY

Aggies and State University Will Clash in Match to Settle Championship.

DEADLOCK HELD PROBABLE

Stewart's Team Seems to Have Edge but He Fears Bezdek Has Something Up His Sleeve for Great Corvallis Game.

BY ROSCOE FAWCETT. Football in Oregon is sitting on the Tap of Winter. The intercollegiate seawill be ushered out in brilliant style this afternoon at Corvallis, when the University of Oregon and the Ore-gon Agricultural College clash for the state championship. From an Oregon viewpoint this is the big morsel of the season. It ought to prove a classic in more than name. Thousands of enthusiasts, alumni and students will gather around the Corvallis gridiron. Two special trains are to leave Portland this morning, the Southern Pacific at 9:10 o'clock and the Oregon Electric at 9:45 o'clock, and nearly 2000 fans are expected to be on them.

But not alone will the crowd make it the blue ribbon sporting event of the season.

Coach Stewart is reported to have said yesterday: "Lutz, kick five goals from the 25-yard line in succession and yesterday.

The rival elevens are remarkably closely matched and it would not surprise anybody were the historic rivals to battle to another tie score, Last Fall the finish found them dead-locked in the throes of a 10-10 game at Al-

Aggies Seem to Have Edge.

On the surface, of course, the Aggles have a slight edge over the University boys. They have not been defeated this Fall and have a 0-0 tie with the Washington champions to their credit, whereas Washington defeated Oregon, 19-9.

Furthermore, Coach Bezdek, the miracle man of Eugene, has had to rearrange his team considerably, owing to injuries. Two or three of his regulars will be on the sidelines, from all Quarterback Anse Cornell will be missed most of all, although Oregon supporters were not expecting him to appear. He did not start the Washington game and when he was shoved in he lasted only a few minutes. Star Center Will Be Out.

Risely, perhaps the best center in the conference, will also be out, as will Malarkey at half and his first string substitute, Bigbee. These absentees may be greatly missed, but Coach Stewart thinks the 'varsity mentor may have something up his sleeve and not one rose-tinted note has come from Corvallis in many a day.

not one rose-tinted note has come from Corvallis in many a day.

In the punting line, Art Lutz, of Santa Ana, Cal., ought to have it on Beckett a few yards to the boot. Lutz, however, will meet a foeman worthy of his steel in open field offensive tactics. Captain Parsons, of Oregon, has been an all-star choice of the critics for two years back. Today's hattle may decide which of the two Oregonians is to land on the coveted honor nians is to land on the coveted honor Offensively the Aggles will use their novel center side pass to the backfield. This does away with a quarterback This does away with a quarterback and gives the Aggles two halves and two fullbacks. Hugo Bezdek also uses the direct pass, but the pass is made straight back by the center, as is the case with Michigan, Yale, Minnesota and most of the Eastern elevers.

UNIVERSITY OF OREGON, Eugene, Nov. 20.—(Special.)—Coach Bezdek sent the squad through two hours of signal practice today as a final preparation for the Corvallis game tomorrow.

The players were shifted frequently, half a dozen substitutes getting a chance to run through the plays with the team. Although the definite lineup will not be announced until just before the game, the lemon-yellow team probably will be about as follows: Left end, Snyder; center, Coseman; right guard, Cook; right tackle, Beckett; left guard, Snyder; center, Coseman; right guard, Cook; right tackle, Philbin; right end, Hendricka or Mitchell; quarter, Sharp or Huntington; left end, Crowell; full, Bryant; right half, Parsons, Philbin gor, and has been busy, but he explains that he has nothing at the put in at tackle.

Cornell has turned in his suit and there is no chance of the tiny field general appearing in the game.

Sharp, the former Multnomah basketshall player, appears as the most likely candidate for his place.

Crowell is leading the other aspir-ants for left half, and the burden of the surface of the falf, and the burden of the surface of the falf, and the burden of the surface of the final preparation of the surface of the tiny field general appearing in the game.

OREGON AGRICULTURAL COLLEGE.

OREGON AGRICULTURAL COLLEGE, Corvallis, Nov. 20.—(Special.)—A light workout this noon completed the preparations of the Oregon Agricultural College squad for the game with Oregon tomorrow. The team on which Aggle fans are basing their hopes for victory tomorrow is "fit," and barring accidents, should perform up to standard tomorrow.

Comment on the campus is varied. Some fans expect both sides to score; others look for a scoreless tie; but nobody looks for a big score either way. The announcement that Art Lutz will be able to play has cheered the hearts of the locals. King will be able to go in at end in Schuster's place if necessary. Bissett, who had hoped to get into shape for this game, reinjured his shoulder the first of this week and is again carrying his wing in a sling.

Wolverton Has Recreation Park Tled Up Until First of Year-Location for 1916 in Doubt.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 20.—(Special.)—Henry Berry said today that he has paid part of the purchase price for the San Francisco Seals, making it assured that the Seals will have new owners next season. Quarterback McKenna, of Collegians, Makes Gain Every Time He Gets Ball-Teamwork Best Seen in Local League.

BY EARL R. GOODWIN.

Hughie McKenna, of Columbia, was the big star. Whether he caught the ball on the fly or on the bounce after a punt, the little quarter never ran it back less than ten yards and more often he made 25 and 30 yards. The teamwork exhibited by the campustrained contingent was the best ever seen in the local interscholastic league and it would be difficult to surpass the ability shown at forming of interferences for the man with the ball.

Higginbotham missed the home plate on 102 batters. His bitter Hussar rival, Klawitter, of the Oaks, gave free transportation to 193, hit nine and issued seven erratic heaves. But this is not all. As a climax, Roy Hitt, of Venice, he of the German lager front elevation, walked no fewer than 116 rivals, thus excelling all contemporaries in the rush for the no fewer than 116 rivals, thus exceeding all contemporaries in the rush for the

The contest at New Haven probably will make football history, since the combinations appear evenly matched in strength, and each is the master of spectacular and diversified attack. The possibilities and advantages of one spectacular and diversified attack. The possibilities and advantages of one eleven, as seen from certain angles, are balanced by the ability of the opposing team along other lines. It is this uncertainty that is the outcome of the game, added to the traditional interest in this Eastern football classic that it is estimated will attract more than 70,000 spectators to New Haven.

An interesting contest may be expected at Boston, where Dartmouth and Syracuse meet. Each eleven has a fine record and a powerful combination. It would appear from the season's work that the Hanoverians are a triffe
