ELECTION CONSIGNS COLONEL TO RANKS

Own Party Has Accomplished Nothing but Defeat of Republican Measures.

ARE IN OBLIVION

Reforms for Which Republicans Are Striving Delayed by Roosevelt and No Compensating Benefit Has Resulted.

OREGONIAN NEWS BUREAU, Washington, Nov. 22,—"What good has the Progressive party accomplished?" asked one of the most progressive Republicans in Congress, discussing the results of the recent election. Answering his own question, he said:

"It set the progressive movement back 20 years; it eliminated from public life many of the most progressive leaders within the Republican party; it elected a Democratic President and a Democratic Congress by minority vote in 1912, and re-elected a Democratic Congress this year. Having accom-plished these things, the Progressive party has ceased to be a political factor in most of the states, and in another two years will have lost its potency everywhere."

Republican Party Progressive. Republican Party Progressive.

A survey of the results of the election this year and the results of 1912 confirm this opinion. At the time Colonel Roosevelt undertook to wreck the Republican party and build up in its stead what he chose to call the Progressive party the progressive element was nearly strong enough to dominate the Republican organization, and many of the old "stand-pat" leaders had retired or were about to be retired. The Republican party had made a reputation for progress; it had enacted scores Republican party had made a reputa-tion for progress; it had enacted scores of progressive National measures, and Republican Legislatures in many of the states had put through laws that were as progressive as any Colonel Roose-velt ever demanded.

Had the fight for progressive ideas, progressive men and progressive re-forms been made entirely within the Republican party, that party today would be in power and the progressive element would be dominant.

Colonel's Supporters Thrown Out. Because the Colonel insisted on build-Because the Colonel insisted on building up his third party, and because he thought he could put the Republican party out of business, the men who then gave him their sympathy and support—who had been closest to him during his term in the White House—have been thrust out of the limelight and out of office, and the progressive strength in Congress has been diminished, all because the Colonel refused to make his fight for progress within the Republican party.

fight for progress within the Republican party.

Looking over the list of those defeated one finds the names of Senators Beveridge, of Indiana; Bourne of Oregon, Brown of Nebraska, Dixon of Montana, Dolliver of Iowa (who died before the Chicago revolt, however), Bristow of Kansas, Burton of Ohio and Crawford of South Dakota. Even Victor Murdock, the Progressive leader in the House, went down to defeat at the recent election, and that sterling Progressive, Gifford Pinchot, made such a pittable showing in the Pennsylvania Senatorial campaign as to mark him forever as a "dead" one, politically.

Slaughter Not Finished.

Slaughter Not Finished. The slaughter is not done. There remain in the Senate two men who sided Colonel Roosevelt, Senator Poindexter, of Washington, and Senator Clapp, of Minnesota. Two years hence, when these Senators seek re-election, they, too, will go down to defeat, un-less they see the light and return to the Republican party, and even if they do they may not land the Republican nomination in 1916. Senator LaFollette, also, is likely to be retired to private life, with Poin-dexter and Clapp. While LaFollette was not a party to the Roosevelt thirdparty movement, having been a rival candidate for the Republican nomina-tion, he was, in his prime, one of the tion, he was, in his prime, one of the most forceful progressive Republicans in the Senate, and the gubernatorial election in Wisconsin this year, which resulted in the election of Governor Phillip on a platform opposed to all that LaFollette represents, foreshadows the retirement of "Fighting Bob" when his present term expires. when his present term expires.

Real Progress Checked.

It was the Roosevelt bolt, and what followed, that put a check to the progressive movement in the United States; it was Roosevelt who killed the movement he professed to advo-cate, and he did this because he overestimated his own strength and popularity. The progressive legislation of the past has been Republican legislation. It is only in Republican states that Senators were elected by popular vote of the people prior to the adoption of the constitutional amendment. It was only in Republican states that the initiative and referendum had been adopted

In the late campaign no candidate of importance supported by Colonel Roosevelt was elected, nor was any candidate of importance whom he at-tacked defeated by the voters. These facts are apparent to Colonel Roosevelt. He doubtless realizes the damage he has done the Progressive cause, and he must have awakened to the and he must have awakened to the folly of his judgment two years ago; but if he has or if he does awaken to all this, he also will awaken to the fact that he cannot be the Republican leader in 1916, for in the two past campaigns he fought his best to destroy the Republican party and failed.

His own party having gone on the rocks, he must return to the Republican party, but he will not return as its leader.
