MOTHER OF TINY ACTRESS A LARME OVER HEADLINE

Leonie Dana, Star of "The Poor Little Rich Girl," at Heilig, Laughs When Paper Links Name of Play and Bigamy.

BY LEONIE CASS BARR.
DARK consternation reared rampant in the Flugrath apartment at the Seward hotel yesterday, where Mother Flugrath and her wee pretty little girl, Leonie (Dana) Flugrath, were pondering over a headline—ones the screaming scare sort—in a San Francisco paper.

"What will father say?" wondered Leonie, and "My, I hope none of the neighbors ever see this" murmured Leonie's young money.

"The scareline read, 'Is the Mother of the Poor Little Rich Girl a Bigamist?' Since everyone has come to associate Leonie Dana with the poor little rich girl that headline did sound dreadfully personal somehow to mother.

"You know how the world looks toward stage folk," she said, "So curious about the inside of our lives, whether we are as old or as young as we look, whether our teeth or morals are false, and scandal is particularly relished. And this headline is a headline—ones to me. Of course, it's amusing to us—but you have to read through a whole column to find out that it means Eleanor Gates who was Mrs. R. H. Tully and lately became Mrs. Moore.

Chilly Sees Joke in Line. Mother Flugrath smiled ruefully, but Leonie thought it was a great joke on someone. Then she listened carefully while her mother explained what bigamy is—and made clear to her how a healthy normal child can be unbounded search for information.

Remember in the play how she has everyone racking their heads to spell out the meaning of the word. If that's the right way. Well, Leonie lives up to it every minute. She carries a little library of mumbled books, and a dictionary, and each book is French with one of the company and talks German with mother. She doesn't give up about the French words, they're not alive, but she loves real babies and mothers her heart out on a white rabbit she carries with her.

Little Actress Likes Animals. Leonie adores dogs and cats and horses and she has a special fondness for the little white dog named Willie Williamsbridge, "the town of no joys the sobriquet of poet of the Pacific, and when completed it is to be forwarded to Earl Kitchener, secretary for War of Great Britain.

There are three of the Flugrath girls—Edna, who is the only one to keep the family name, and Viola and Leonie.

Edna is with the London Film Company in New York and under Father Flugrath's wing, while Leonie stays away out here in a big play. The girls are all beauties, with dark curls and deeply set brilliant blue eyes with long upturning lashes. And Leonie, senior, is striking resemblance to Maude Adams. She has the same little twisted whimsical smile, the curious upward-flung eyebrows and an adorable wistfulness. She has never seen Maude Adams play and that is Leonie's present ambition.
