Mrs. E. H. Keller and son.

But because they have not the costliness and the seeming richness of silk and lace, we have not the courage to wear them where our sisters were luxuriously attired and we are content with the majority of gossamer in those pretty cottons and with our seeing their perfect suitability and our becoming accustomed to the ceremony of evening of the burden of expense and the consequent greater enjoyment of life. I for one am in hopes that we will untidily take a stand for simpler dressing. I sincerely hope that one of the results of the present war will be an increase in the acreage of dress and dress, of American fashions for American women of styles that are tasteful, suitable to the purposes of dress and not recklessly extravagant.

THE SANDMAN STORY FOR TO-NIGHT

By Mrs. F. A. Walker

Selma and the Dog. SELMA lived in a cottage on the edge of a big forest with her two brothers. They were hunters and went into the forest every day and at night came home to a good supper that Selma had cooked for them.

But they did not treat Selma kindly for all that she did for them, and often they would eat all the supper and never leave so much as a piece of bread for her.

One day while they were away a poor dog with a sore foot came limping to the door of Selma's cottage and began to whine.

So she bound up the sore foot and then gave the dog some water and made a bed for him under her bed, for she knew her brothers would drive the dog out when they came home at night if they saw him.

That night her brothers were kinder than usual; they gave her some scraps of meat and a piece of bread and tea for supper.

Selma ate part of it and the rest she put in her pocket to give to the poor sick dog, but her brothers saw her slip the bread and meat into her pocket and watched to see what she did with it.

Selma washed the dishes and put the room in order before she went to her room, but the brothers still watched, and when she took the food from her pocket, the others were looking through the crack in the wall and saw the dog. They threw open the door and drove out the dog, in spite of all Selma's pleading.

"We do not want anything around here that cannot work," they told her. "A sick dog will never be of any use; his leg is broken, and it will never be so he can help us hunt; let him go into the forest and die."

But Selma would not let the dog go alone; she went out with him, and they slept under a tree, Selma covering the dog from the cold with her dress. In the morning she hid him under a bush and the dog seemed to understand he was to keep quiet and did not bark.

Selma cooked the breakfast for her brothers and they went into the forest, but they did not leave anything for poor Selma. "You cannot be hungry when you give part of your supper to a sick dog," they told her.

Selma ran to the place where the dog was hidden and brought him into the house as soon as her brothers were out of sight.

She gave him a bone her brothers had left and some water and bound his sore foot with a clean cloth, and then she went upstairs to make her brothers' beds. When she came back the dog had disappeared and in the chair by the window sat a young man in a velvet suit and a hat with a long black plume.

"Do not be afraid, my little princess," he said as he held out his hand to Selma. "You have saved me from a dreadful fate and I will repay you by taking you away from your brothers, who do not treat you kindly."

"I am a prince whom a wicked witch changed into a dog because I would not marry her daughter, who was also a wicked witch, and after she had changed me into a dog she struck me with her cane and broke my leg, saying as she drove me into the forest: 'A dog you shall remain until a young and handsome girl shall bind your broken leg.'"

"Now the spell is broken, and I can go back to my castle, where you shall live the life of a princess, and never want for anything again."

Selma lived in happiness the rest of her days in the castle with her prince, and the animal he ever turned away from their door. No matter how sick or wounded it may be, it is given a home and made comfortable. (Copyright, 1914, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate, New York City.)

A Dainty Fashion Promised for This Winter.

AS a result of the war we are promised a new fashion for this Winter that ought to result rather beneficially to womankind. To be sure, few women desire to use the war as a means of profit to themselves. Such benefits would be blood-stained. And it is likewise a pity that if a thing is good we cannot adopt it for its own intrinsic merits and not because some tragedy such as the present compels us to. But, nevertheless, human nature is such that it seems as if we need adversity to show us some of the jewels that are already in our possession.

The present movement is an effort made by certain social leaders of Washington, D. C., to induce society women to adopt cotton as the fabric for their evening wear this winter. The present war has so curtailed the importation of cotton abroad that the cotton-growers in the South are facing financial ruin. And a group of loyal American women are going to help them; they can induce their sister American women to wear cotton this winter.

It is an effort in itself certainly worthy every American woman's support. What better work can we do than to give to the aid of those in distress? If the people in the South were suffering from famine or flood how quickly our purses would be opened to assist them. This movement is still more worthy. For instead of making their objects of charity we are enabling them to continue their various industries and support themselves.

But the good derived from such a work is more far-reaching. In its benevolent it reacts upon those who assist. For this adoption of cotton gowns for evening wear will do far more than help the cotton-growers of the South and the mill workers both South and North. It will sensibly lessen the strain upon the family purse in many a home. It will reduce living expenses and this will mean a lessening of worry, a lightening of care and of the striving to make both ends meet that now taxes many a breadwinner to the point of breakdown. It will also teach many of us the fact that we can dress daintily and prettily at much less cost than we thought possible. And it may give many of us the backbone to take a stand for simpler living.

So you see for many reasons it is a movement to be indorsed and supported.

And though I am thoroughly in sympathy with helping the cotton-growers of the South and also in the use of American weaves instead of imported ones, the greatest benefit to be derived from the effort will be, in my point of view, the lesson many of us will learn in regard to the matter of cost and charm in dress. As we all know, there are many cotton weaves as dainty and exquisite as we could want for dress.

Winter Care Of The Garden

Fall Fertilizers for Lawns. TO STIMULATE the growth of a lawn and to improve its appearance for the following Spring, no better time is afforded than now when the application of properly rotted manure in the late Fall, according to the United States Department of Agriculture's specialist. This application should not be made until the frosts have stopped the growth of the grass. Ten to twenty-two horse loads spread in the acre and according as the soil is more or less rich.

It is most important that the manure should be thoroughly rotted before application. Weeds and grasses are killed; otherwise damage done by weeds will more than offset the fertilizing value of the application. Manure really secures the best results when it is suited for spreading over the lawn. Unless it is properly "composted" it may have most of its valuable constituents destroyed by improper handling. "Compost" manure properly it should be treated as follows:

Put all your horse manure, with alternate layers of sod or other litter. Keep it wet enough so it will not burn. Let it stand a whole year through Summer and Winter. Turn it over two or three times during the year. It will then be ready for use on the lawns and danger from weed seeds will be minimized.

Ground bone meal and wood ashes—Many people object to the use of manure at all, not only because of the danger from weed seeds but because of its unsightly and insanitary appearance. These will undoubtedly prefer to use something else, and the most common substitute is finely crushed bone or bone meal. This should be applied at the rate of from 500 pounds to one ton per acre, according as the ground is more or less rich. Especially prepared lawn fertilizers and those that are odorless are better.

With the bone meal it is desirable to use double the quantity of wood ashes. These ashes contain considerable lime in a very desirable form, as well as other valuable ingredients, and they are apt to be more or less costly.

Ordinarily muriate of potash would be found more economical than wood ashes, although the latter does not contain the lime which the other fertilizer imparts to the soil. On account of the European war the potash may prove difficult to obtain than the wood ashes. Only one-tenth the quantity of potash should be used as of bone meal.

The potash may be sown separately or mixed with the bone meal. It is desirable to use double the quantity of wood ashes. These ashes contain considerable lime in a very desirable form, as well as other valuable ingredients, and they are apt to be more or less costly.

Tankage and fish scraps are even richer in important elements than ground bone, but are frequently of a mechanical condition for handling, that is, they contain hair or other foreign coarse matter. Their bad odor also makes them objectionable.

'DOLL SHOWER' PLANNED

MUTS TO COLLECT GIFTS FOR POOR AT BAKER PERFORMANCE.

Players Promise to Sew Clothes for Toy Department that Will Cheer Children at Christmas.

A "doll shower" at the Baker Theatre, being planned by the Muts in conjunction with George L. Baker, as a plan to secure a big supply of dolls for distribution among families of the poor on Christmas day. The women of the Muts Stock Company have announced to the Muts that they intend to sew doll clothes and outfit dolls for the new toy department that the Muts has opened in their Christmas relief work.

The plan for the doll shower is to have a home for the dolls, and that every child who comes to the theater will be requested to send a doll up to the stage or leave one at the boxes. In this way and by other methods under consideration, the Muts hope to secure enough dolls and toys to make happy every child in every poor family in the city on Christmas.

METER EXTENSION URGED

Water Consumers Outside City Unable to Comply With Order.

Inability of water-users outside the city to comply with the order of City Commissioner Daly to install water meters by December 1 may result in an extension of time being granted. The order for meters was made about two months ago. Many of the users waited until the last two months, and, in consequence, were unable to get the work completed.

Superintendent Kaiser, of the Water Bureau, will ask that the time be extended until January 1. Provision has been made for the placing of meters in all residences using Bell Run water outside the city. The meters are to be borne by the consumer. In cases where the user is unable to pay the cost upon completion arrangements have been made for payment on the installment plan.

WEAK HEART IS BLAMED

ELECTRIC FIXTURES DECLARED NOT CAUSE OF MAN'S DEATH.

Inspector Reports that Under Ordinary Conditions Shock Received Would Not Prove Fatal.

That the death of Albert Nachtigall from an electric shock while he stood in a bathtub at his home, 563 Lexington avenue Tuesday, was due probably as much to heart trouble as to the shock he received from touching a socket in an electric fixture, is the opinion of City Electric Inspector Dunlap, who made an investigation yesterday.

The electric wiring in the Nachtigall residence was examined carefully by Inspector Dunlap and no defects were found. The current was tested on meters and found to be the ordinary voltage for residence services. In examining the fixtures Mr. Dunlap found that Mr. Nachtigall often had put a plug in the light socket connecting up a lamp used for photography. It is Mr. Dunlap's opinion that the young man got hold of some part of this arrangement. Being in water and probably having wet hands the shock was severe, but not severe enough, in Mr. Dunlap's opinion, to cause death.

"I am convinced, after through investigation," said Mr. Dunlap yesterday, "that Nachtigall was in poor health and had a weak heart. The severe shock he received from the electric fixture was too great for him to stand. I do not think that the amount of electricity recorded in the fixture would be sufficient to kill a person in good health."

The accident at the Portland Railway, Light & Power Company had an investigation of the accident made. The service was examined to see if there was any possibility of high tension wires, such as are used for street arc lights, having reached the wires supplying light to the Nachtigall residence. No trace of a cross circuit of this kind was found.

Decree From W. W. Clair Granted on Charge of Desertion.

That he always obtained work a long way from home and visited her only once a month is the charge made against John Russell by his wife, Minnie, who yesterday brought suit for divorce. Sarah E. sued Galt Wilson Church for divorce, alleging cruel and inhuman treatment. It is charged that he beat and choked her. The right to resume her maiden name, Sloan, is asked.

Irene Wyett sued R. W. Wyett for divorce, alleging failure to support. She asks that her maiden name, Adams, be restored. The two were married in Salem in 1911. Lena was granted a divorce from W. W. Clair by Judge Davis, desertion being the basis for the action.
