PLOT AROUND BAD BILLS

DISPLAY OF COUNTERFEIT PAPER SAVES HERO FROM RUIN—COMPANY MOST CAPABLE IN DEPICTING ROLES OF ROLICKING COMEDY.

"READY MONEY." CAST: Jackson Ives... Robert Gleckler, Stephen Baird... William H. Powell, William Stewart... Walter Gilbert...

BY LEONE CASS BAER. People may be howling that coin of the realm is scarce, and it's true that no one is tossing it carelessly away...

Baird, the young miner in "Ready Money," is broke in New York in the gold mine, his partner working halfheartedly to strike gold...

Baird tries to persuade his friends not to buy what he feels now is worthless stock, but they think he is trying to renege on letting them in on a ground-floor scheme...

Mr. Ramsdell, who has followed Ives over all the world, trails him and associates Baird's sudden success in selling stocks to his friendship with Ives...

Two Baker Players vie for leading honors—Robert Gleckler and William F. Powell. Mr. Gleckler is Ives, a role he plays with conservative grimace...

Charles Halton, as the hen-pecked father of Baird's fiancée, gave a gem in spiciness resistance, and a trio of artists, Walter Gilbert, Clark Silva, and Walter Seligried did excellent work in comedy and almost dramatic as the sometimes skeptical, sometimes believing friends of Baird...

IRENE OHLER made a lot out of the role of Baird's fiancée, and played it simply and with charm. Mary Edgett Baker and Eileen Wilson were girlish in girlish roles as near fiancées of men in the play, and Florence Roberts was a delightfully fuzzy wife to the hen-pecked Halton role...
