Memorial Services Held at First Presbyterian Church With Impressive Ritual.

14 ABSENT AT ROLL CALL

Lodge, Headed by Band, Marches to Church-W. C. Bristol and Judge Morrow Address Mourners. "Auld Lang Syne" Sung.

Memorial services for departed members of the Elks were held by the Portland lodge at the First Presbyterian Church, at Twelfth and Alder streets yesterday afternoon. Several hundred members of the Eiks attended and many friends assembled to bow in prayer over the memory of the departed lodgemen.

The Elks assembled at the temple at and marched in a body, headed by the Eiks' band, to the church. The funeral march of Chopin opened the memorial exercises. This was fololwed by an or-gan prelude, "In Winter," by Edgar E. Coursen. Broadway and Stark street at 2 P. M.

Coursen. A quartet, composed of Mrs. Jane Burns Albert, soprano; Dr. R. M. Emer-son, tenor; Mrs. Sara Glance Bowman, contraito, and M. L. Bowman, bass, sang "Now the Day Is Over." The Elks' rit-ualistic ceremony was next. M. R. Spaulding, secretary of Portland Lodge, No. 142, read the roll call of absent brothers. After each name was called and the answer "Absent" had been made, a bell was tolled. The audience arose to sing "Auld

Bristol delivered an ad-dress on the meaning of the services. Mrs. Jane Burns Albert sang "The Fromise of Life." Ralph E. Moody had been selected to deliver the eulogy, but owing to Mr. Moody's illness Circuit Judge Robert Morrow spoke. "Twilight" was sung by M. L. Bowman, Mrs. Sara Glance Bowman and Charles Duncan

The heroines is played marvelously well by Irene Oshier, who certainly has a corner in this "repressed emo-tion" acting. This heroine has a deep, dark dank secret in her past, and a professional blackmailer unearths it. The secret is an inconsequential little hing like a mock marrisge in which alt the played the leading role away back six years before the play opens. She goes to the professional blackmailing letter. She has not the thousand other way for her to obtain the letter. She grabs the letter from his hands and he tries to get it back. In the struggle she attacks him with a bill-holder, driving the pointed end into his heart. But his dying hand presses a button which releases a flashlight and camera machination and obtains he picture.
