Winged M Puck Chasers Outplayed, but Keep Professional, Busy in 25-Minute Halves-Vancouver Men Here Tuesday.

Portland's new professional hockey feam was christened at the Twentiethstreet refrigerating plant yesterday afternoon. There was no champagne in evidence, but it was a chistening, nevertheless. Approximately 2000 enthusiasts lined about the rink and saw Muldoon's Dreadnoughts defeat Multnomah amateur hockey team, 5 goals to 1.

It was a good, stiff practice session. the first real game the Dreadnoughts have played, and they looked to be in excellent physical condition for the opening game of the Coast League season Tuesday night.

Two 25-minute halves were played without a stop even for an intermission, and some of the Winged M puck chasers' tongues were hanging out like those of bird dogs that have beat the brush all day. But they stuck at it and kept the professionals as busy as could be expected.

The Vancouver professional team, which will open the Coast season here tomorrow night, will arrive shortly after 3 o'clock in the afternoon and be quartered at the Multnomah Hotel.

Two new men, Cook and McKay, are in the lineup, but the rest of the Canucks are veterans. Taylor, the rover, is one of the most spectacular puck chasers in Canada and no doubt will prove a favorite here.

Another remarkable player with the visitors is Mallen, right wing. Mallen played with New Westminster, now Portland, last year, but was sold to Vancouver. He is a player of 10 or 12 years' professional experience.

Owing to the scarcity of high-class material the Portland Amateur Hockey League has been pruned to four clubs the Multnomah Club, Waverly Country Club, Harrimans and the Rowing Club.

The Waverly and Multnomah clubs ill practice this afternoon at 5:30 clock and the Rowing Club and the Harrimans at 10:30 o'clock, after the night skating session.

"There is to be no secret silpping of money to any itchy-palmed 'amateur at our club," said Manager Hansen yesterday in discussing the card that will be staged tomorrow evening at the Armory.

Hansen is a boxer himself and said that in selecting his card he took particular pains not to match certain boxers who are in the game for the coin.
