Be at Heilig Friday Night. The seat sale for the John McCor-mack song recital at the Heilig Theater Friday night, under the direction of Steers & Coman, will open at the Heilig this morning. A well-known writer of wide acquaintance among musical celebrities of Europe and America said: "John McCormack easily is the greatest lyric tenor the world has produced in the past two generations. I say this because I have heard them all, and have been personally acquainted with most of them. I make no pretenses re-garding the technique of music. But at the McCormack recital I saw a Frenchman cry and grip my hand at his "J'ai Pleure en Reve," an English-man blubber at his "Mother Macree," a German grow misty at his song in that language; a man who speaks Italian as fluently as English catch for breath in his "La Donna e Mobile," and when it comes down to the Irish—well, you leave that to me. Now there has been nothing like it done in all the world. The heart-grip of the thing to one The heart-grip of the thing, to one who understands the Irish temperament, leaves you next to dead."
