E. HENRY WEMME IN HIS FINAL REST

In Death Philanthropist Buried in Riverview Faces His Beloved Mount Hood.

FUNERAL IS IMPRESSIVE

Capitalist's Motorcar, Draped in Crepe, Is in Cortege-Old Friend Eulogizes Departed and Business Houses Honor Dead.

E, Henry Wemme is in his final rest-ing place in Riverview Cemetery on a high, sightly lot, his face turned to-ward Mount Hood, which he loved so well. This was in accordance with his own request, made to friends some time ago.

Impressive services, profuse floral offerings and a church filled with sorrowing friends marked Mr. Wemme's funeral at 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon. The ceremonies were held in St. James English Lutheran Church, at West Park and Jefferson streets. Rev. J. A. Leas, pastor. officiated.

The funeral cortege, made up of a long line of automobiles, wound down Broadway to Washington street and thence out Third street on the way to

Following "Abide With Me," sung by Mrs. Fred L. Olson, George W. Stapleton, an old friend of Mr. Wemme, delivered a culogy. He said:

"No better example of what patience and industry can accomplish can be shown than in the life of E. Henry Wemme. He knew no such words as discouragement or failure. He was a man of but few of the higher educational accomplishments, but his life was such that he was honored by Portland's foremost cillzens.

"Mr. Wemme was eccentric to a degree, but he was enthusiastic in the order in which they are received.
