

SCHOOL SYSTEM IS SUBJECT OF ATTACK

Administration, Class Methods and Tuition Plan Are Raked by Legislators.

MANY CHANGES SUGGESTED

Senator Day Complains of "Too Many Fancy Trimmings" in Present Methods—City and County Heads Questioned.

Present conditions in school administration and prevailing methods of school regulation came in for considerable criticism last night at the hands of the legislative committee having in charge a survey of school affairs in the state.

The committee, which consists of Senators L. N. Day, T. I. Perkins, Gus C. Moser and Robert S. Farrell, had before it a number of school officials, including the legislative committee, Superintendent, R. H. Thomas, Clerk of the City Board, and A. P. Armstrong, County Superintendent. Affairs of the various school systems were inquired into with considerable detail, and many suggested changes in the law were outlined.

"There are altogether too many fancy trimmings in the schools today," said Senator Day.

"But we are doing the work of the private schools and academies fully 50 per cent cheaper," protested Superintendent Alderman. "We have to meet their competition."

Textbook situation surveyed. Senator Day said he thought the present system offers too many elective studies to high school pupils. He said that is what makes the textbook bills so high. He pointed out, also, that it is particularly to inquire into the textbook situation that the committee has undertaken its activities.

"The idea is to offer boys or girls something to their liking," explained the Superintendent. "If we can make them like their work, we can keep them in school."

"Don't you have boys who play hooky now?"

"Oh, yes, boy nature always is about the same."

Senator Moser asked Mr. Alderman his opinion of the teachers' tenure-of-office law passed by the 1913 Legislature.

"I want to see it given a fair trial," was the answer.

There was some expression of opinion to the effect that the law does not centralize the responsibility for discharging undesirable teachers. Mr. Alderman pointed out that it places this responsibility on the School Board and that it relieves the Superintendent of possible embarrassment which might lead to inefficiency in the school.

Tuition payment discussed. Senator Day suggested a law providing that if a boy or girl living in one county attends high school in another county his or her home county should pay the tuition.

In response to the question, "Are our schoolbooks and other material in other cities?" Mr. Alderman answered "Yes."

Mr. Thomas, questioned regarding the proposed organization of a so-called agricultural college, declared the term a misnomer. He said provision has been made to install an agricultural department in the Franklin High School if conditions justify the action.

"We better leave the agricultural business to the central colleges," insisted Senator Day. "This attempt to make farmers out of city chaps ought to quit."

Senator Day then took up an analysis of the "school survey report" recently submitted by a group of prominent educators who made a study of the Portland school system.

Maudlin sentiment seen. "It seems to me," he commented, "that there were only three points on which all members of the survey board agreed. One was that the town meetings should end, another that the superintendent ought to have an automobile and the third was to have an agricultural high school. Now the superintendent has his automobile, we are going to cut out the town meetings, and we need in the agricultural high school."

Senator Day then read part of the survey report and the town meeting sentiment "there is a lot of maudlin sentiment about this stuff."

"Yes, it's highbrow," agreed Mr. Thomas.

The reports that Senator Day read seemed to be new to the other Senators. He insisted that he is the only one man in Portland, who has the right to report all the way through, and claimed an iron cross for his labors.

Cost of books not opposed. Further protest was offered against the great number of books that are required of children completing studies beyond the high school, but compilation of figures revealed that the cost of such books is only $16.86, which Senator Farrell declared to be fairly low.

Mr. Thomas, when asked for suggested changes in the school laws, declared that the corrupt practice act would apply to school elections and that the time of voting be fixed between the hours of 2 and 8 P. M., so that all, who have a right, can vote. He disapproved of the idea of holding school elections on the same day with city elections. The schools should be kept out of politics, he said.

He also approved the plan to give all registered voters, regardless of whether they are taxpayers, the right to vote at school elections.

The advisability of retaining a firm of attorneys—Nicholas & McCoy at $50 a month to advise the school authorities and then appropriating $2,400 additional for legal services within a year also, was questioned by the Senators.

Other changes advocated. The financial and also came in for discussion. It was generally agreed that school improvements should be paid for from tax levies rather than from proceeds from sale of bonds.

Mr. Armstrong suggested that the time of holding teachers' examinations be changed from December and June to February and August, and offered argument in support of his theory.

He also asked for a law that will make it compulsory for districts adjoining union high school districts to pay tuition for pupils sent to such high schools. He pointed out that at present Rockwood district in Multnomah County is sending children to the Gresham High School without helping to pay for the cost of maintenance of that school.

LOCAL OPTION LAW IS HALTED BY COURT

Clarke County, Washington, Restrained From Putting Act Into Effect.

FEDERAL BENCH DECIDES

United States Judge Cushman, at Tacoma, Holds Voters Do Not Want Prohibition Until 1916—Brewery Pleads.

TACOMA, Wash., Dec. 22.—(Special.)—The first judicial opinion bearing in any way on Washington's new state-wide prohibition law was handed down in the United States court today by Judge Cushman, who made an order restraining the officials of Clarke County from putting into effect the local option law adopted by the voters of that county in November.

Judge Cushman holds it was plainly the intent of voters of Washington that the state-wide prohibition measure should not go into operation until January 1, 1916, despite the legislative act decreeing that all laws initiated and adopted by the people shall go into effect 30 days after adoption. He gave it as his opinion that the people desired to grant the liquor interests time to adjust their business, and said he would refuse to permit a local option law that would violate this intention by closing the saloons at once.

Loss by Brewery Assented. Argument today on the Clarke County local option law lasted an hour and a half. It was brought on by the county having voted for the state prohibition law as well as for local option and Prosecuting Attorney Burnett said the voters of his county had desired to close the saloons January 1, 1915. The restraining order was asked by the Northern Brewer company of Vancouver, in Clarke County, which contended it would lose more than $2000 a year through the closing of Vancouver's 17 saloons.

In arguing the brewery would not be a loser by the local option law, Prosecutor Burnett said:

"The effect of the initiative measure and the local option bill as well as merely to change the channel and method whereby wholesale manufacturers may convey liquor to people. There will be no less beer consumed. The taste will still be there."

Conveyance Only Change. "The only effect will be to change the manner in which it is conveyed. The brewery can deliver to private dwelling under the local option law by broken packages by common carriers, so it will not be put out of business."

Judge Cushman interrupted Burnett's argument to ask:

"Is there any possible reason why the people might have voted to delay the operation of the prohibition law until 1916 unless it was to give an opportunity to the liquor interest to dispose of property and adjust business?"

Mr. Burnett, after a few moments' thought, said he could see no other reason.

Restraining Order Granted. A. J. Miller, counsel for the brewery company, said it had been suggested by reason of the delay in getting votes. He contended that the state prohibition law became effective 30 days after its passage, and for that reason the local option law was inoperative.

"The whole state, in voting for the prohibition law, plainly made the decision of the bill operative in 1915, giving the saloons a year to adjust their business," ruled Judge Cushman. "The court will not give any other interpretation and I will grant a restraining order asked by the complainant."

The form of the order was not decided, as Prosecutor Burnett, who goes out of office January 1, said he wanted to consult with his assistants and find out if he desired to appeal to a higher court. Certain forms would permit ready appeals, the court pointed out, and others would not.

MURDER NET TIGHTENS PITTSBURG POLICE ASK THAT ERNEST ROSNAR BE HELD.

Confession by Aged German While Drunk Backed by Facts, but Admission Now Denied.

"Hold Ernest Rosnar. Woman named Sabn was killed on date, year and place mentioned. Have Rosnar make written confession and sign it. Will advise further."

"Superintendent Police, Pittsburgh."

The likelihood of truth in the murder confession of Ernest Rosnar, an aged German, who staggered into police headquarters a week ago crying that he had killed a woman in Pittsburgh and wished to confess his crime, is strengthened by the foregoing telegram, received yesterday from the Pittsburgh authorities by Captain of Detectives Barty.

Since his first drunken confession of murder, Rosnar has retrenched in his statements. Quizzed yesterday afternoon he reiterated his statement that the killing was accidental. He now declares that, with many others, he was shooting at a mark on the fourth of July, 1902, and that he, or someone else, had accidentally shot this woman, who was standing nearby. He declares he never knew her before.

The authorities doubt that he will consent to a written confession of the crime he now denies. He refused absolutely yesterday afternoon to make any incriminating statement. He is being held in the city jail on a 30-day sentence for drunkenness while his case is being investigated.

According to the story first told by Rosnar and which the police believe may be true in the essential details, he killed a Mrs. Matthea Mann, aged 27, on Smithson avenue, in north Pittsburgh, in 1902, because he loved the woman, but was denied her. He is a married man with two children in Pittsburgh; he declared, though his family has not yet been located.

MUTS ON KEEN JUMP

HEADQUARTERS BUSY PLACE AS FOOD AND CANDY GO OUT.

Christmas Tree at Armory to Be Scene of Fun for 4000 Children Tomorrow.

While the Muts are "on the jump" every minute in their relief headquarters making preparations to send out about nine tons of food supplies to the families of the poor on Christmas day, the Christmas tree headquarters of the same organization are equally swamped with the rush of work to get in readiness for the festivities at the Armory all afternoon tomorrow, at which 4000 children will be the guests.

Mixing of food supplies that go into the Christmas baskets are pretty well balanced by the four or five tons of candy and nuts and the five or six tons of toys that are going to be put on the big Christmas tree.

Theaters of the city are to contribute to the entertainment of the afternoon and George Baker is giving all his time today and tomorrow to working up this feature of the programme.

CHICAGO, Dec. 22.—The expulsion of Jews from Jaffa was accompanied by many acts of barbarism and robbery, according to a special cablegram today from Cairo, Egypt, to the Chicago Daily News. The story says that 600 refugee Jews from Jaffa have just arrived at Alexandria on the Italian steamer "Bedouin" and are being held at the point of the bayonet to the quay. Here the Florio was forced to receive as many of them as could be crowded aboard. Scenes attending this operation were heart-rending.

It was after nightfall and harbor police and boatmen stole all the watches and money the refugees were carrying. They tore rings from the fingers and even earrings from the ears of women and girls, and the harbor rang with shrieks and frantic pleas. Children were separated from parents and husbands from wives.

Several of the men, resenting the brutalities to their wives, were thrown overboard by boatmen and drowned before the eyes of the women.

The old Hotel Metropole at Alexandria and other hotels have been hired by the refugees by several wealthy Jews. Many of the refugees are nearly mad with apprehension for the fate of thousands of relatives and friends, for whom there was no room aboard the Florio. It is feared that this is only the beginning of Turkish atrocities. There are 25,000 or more peaceful Russian Jews in Palestine.

VIADUCT TO BE BUILT

SPAN WILL ELIMINATE HOLGATE STREET GRADE CROSSING.

Southern Pacific Notifies City It Will Erect Structure to Cost About $55,000 in Near Future.

A steel and concrete viaduct to cost about $55,000 is to be erected in the near future by the Southern Pacific to eliminate the grade crossing over Holgate street. Notice to this effect has been sent to the City Council by officials of the company, and it is expected that work can begin in a short time. Working plans have been prepared by the city engineering bureau.

The viaduct proposition came up some time ago when Holgate street was paved. The company objected to the cost of the structure as first planned, but the city submitted plans which in turn did not meet with the approval of the city. The company then announced that it was willing to build the structure as first planned, and were drawn by the city accordingly and have been accepted by the company.

The company has asked that after the bridge is built the city take over the maintenance. It is estimated that this would cost no more than $1000 a year. The viaduct will carry Holgate street completely over the railroad tracks. The span will be 300 feet long.

At the meeting of the City Council this morning Commissioner Dieck will submit a number of questions concerning the viaduct which must be settled before it is started. One is whether or not the city is willing to stand the cost of maintaining the bridge. Still another is regarding the procuring of title to some property needed for a fill at the east approach.
