

GEORGE A. THACHER ANALYZES SLAYER

Criminologist Who Cleared Wehrman Murder Mystery Outlines His Steps.

PART OF STORY DOUBTED

Expert Says Confessed Assassin Is Defective Like Tronson, Having Child's Brain—Imprisonment of All Such Urged.

BY GEORGE A. THACHER. John G. H. Sierks, 25 years old, a feeble-minded man, native of Oregon, degenerate and dissipated, an inmate of the State Insane Asylum at Salem for the past two years, confessed yesterday that he killed Mrs. Daisy Wehrman and her little 4-year-old boy in September, 1911, in her lonely cabin near Scappoose.

This is the crime for which John Arthur Pender was convicted by a jury in Columbia County and sentenced to be hanged, and whose sentence since has been commuted to life imprisonment by Governor West. Mr. Pender has spent more than three years in jail, has been practically under sentence of death for a year, and his family has spent thousands of dollars in trying to clear him, and the state also has spent many thousands of dollars in trying to convict him of this terrible murder.

People of Nation Blamed. All this happened because the people of Oregon, as well as the people of the rest of the United States have such a high regard for family affection and such a manly tender feeling for mental defectives that they are unwilling to confine them in institutions.

The hairs in Mrs. Wehrman's dead hand tell the story. These hairs were the woman who first saw the dead body of Mrs. Wehrman through the cabin window. She also saw blood on the outside of the house and on the sill. Instead of raising the alarm, she and telling the neighbors what she had seen she went back home quietly with her 15-year-old daughter and her 3-year-old boy and spent the night.

Next day she returned to her home again and finding it still padlocked on the outside and seeing through the window Mrs. Wehrman's exposed body lying on the floor, she called to her husband, who was at work there. It is said that she met some of her neighbors on the way and talked with them about other matters, but did not mention that she had discovered that Mrs. Wehrman had been killed in her cabin. The reason for this soon will appear.

Presence Near Cabin Learned. In making my study of the testimony and other evidence in the murder, I was impressed by the fact that this young man, John Sierks, was not properly accounted for at the time of the murder. He was seen by one who ought to know told me that he was at Hillsboro at the time the murder was committed. That seemed to eliminate him completely from consideration in the case. A few days ago I saw George Schmitzer and his wife, and Mrs. Schmitzer spoke of the feeble-minded boy and of his evident interest in Mrs. Wehrman and her murder. I understood that John Sierks was at Hillsboro at the time of the murder, but Mr. Schmitzer told me that John Sierks had been in the direction of Hillsboro, but not more than 10 miles from the Wehrman cabin.

I was just finishing the report of the investigation for publication and was asked Mr. MacLaren, Chaplain of the State Penitentiary, if he would go to the insane asylum at Salem and see if John Sierks had brown hair, and if he had, if it was of two different shades of brown.

Janette's Confidence Won. Dr. Steiner gave Mr. MacLaren every assistance in his power and Mr. MacLaren soon won the confidence of this feeble-minded boy by asking him a question, "How did you land here, John?" "A—Because my family had it in for me."

Q—What did they have it in for you for? A—They thought I had something to do with Mrs. Wehrman.

Q—That is what you think it is true? A—(Cunningly and in a whisper) Because I heard my mother and sister talk about it when they thought I was asleep. Mother said to my sister "John did that."

Q—That is a terrible thing. Why didn't you make them tell you what reason they had for saying that? A—(After a little hesitation and in a whisper) I was afraid I would get pinched.

Q—Of course you did not have anything to do with the killing of Mrs. Wehrman, John? A—(After a little hesitation) Yes.

Q—(Visits to Place Admitted.) A—(More hesitation.) Yes, I liked her.

Q—Tell me about it, John. Did you go to the cabin? A—Yes, some times. Mr. Wehrman was not there. He worked in Portland.

Q—Did you have any trouble at home, John? A—Yes, there was lots of trouble at home.

Q—Did the family know about some of your bad habits? A—Yes, the old man knew.

Q—And you want to get out of here, John? A—Yes, I want to get away from here.

This is the substance of Mr. MacLaren's first interview with John Sierks in the insane hospital. Sierks has rather a dark brown hair, but there are many light hairs in his head and some are reddish brown.

In view of these questions and answers, it will be readily understood why Mrs. Sierks did not raise the hue and cry when she saw through the window Mrs. Wehrman's dead body lying on the bed. She knew and her daughter knew that John probably was the murderer. So she went home to think it over.

In Scappoose, and tell him about the affair. Mr. Sierks immediately informed Sheriff Thompson and his deputy, and they went to the house on the same day, which was September 6, 1911, the day the young man was committed in September, 1911, just a year after the murder.

Unconscious Is Shown. On the day after Mr. MacLaren talked with John Sierks, John began to talk to the attendants in the laundry, who he has worked, saying "I might as well let my own head off now; the detective has cut some of my hair off."

He said to Dr. Steiner next day when he talked to him and before the doctor had anything about Mrs. Wehrman that he was 20 miles away when Mrs. Wehrman was killed. He manifested great uneasiness and evidently realized that he had committed a crime in danger of being discovered. Dr. Steiner placed him in the criminal insane ward Saturday.

Yesterday afternoon I had a long conversation with John, and, in discussing what he used to do in Columbia County in the way of fishing and hunting, I asked him about shooting with Smith's place with some other boys from Scappoose in the direction of Hillsboro. This shows that he was only 10 miles from Wehrman's cabin. John told me how much whisky he could drink and said that he could take two quarts. He volunteered the information that on Labor day, when he was at work at Smith's, he was drinking whisky and that at night they went to bed drunk.

He denied visiting at his home about this time. Just as we left the room Dr. Steiner referred to his remark to him and also to Mr. MacLaren, about over-hearing his mother say to his sister that she, John, probably killed Mrs. Wehrman. John repeated the statement to me, and said that he was lying in bed, but was not asleep. He said that he thought it would be all right to go in one ear and out of the other.

"Bugs" Is Explanation. I asked him why he put up with a thing like that and he replied, "Oh, I did not want to raise any hell in the family." I told him he was the limit, and responded, "I guess I am 'bug's' they say I am. At any rate, I'm in here."

Early last evening Mr. MacLaren came to the insane hospital and Sierks was brought down into Dr. Steiner's office. Mr. MacLaren began to talk to him in kindly fashion and asked him if he suspected of killing Mrs. Wehrman and urged him to tell the truth. Sierks sat there looking at Mr. MacLaren like a frightened child, and he said, "I don't know, but I'm sure I didn't do it, he finally whimpered: "Why if I tell you I killed that woman they'll put me in the Penitentiary right away."

Assistance Is Offered. Mr. MacLaren promised John to be his friend and stand by him always. Here Dr. Steiner suggested that he and I should withdraw from the room, and we did so.

In about five minutes Mr. MacLaren opened the door and called us in, saying, "Gentlemen, I'm terribly sorry, but it's true—this boy killed Mrs. Wehrman."

Then in the presence of all of us John told in a broken voice and with tears in his eyes the motive and facts of the killing.

It was a solemn gathering of men that listened to his story. It was taken down by stenographer and typed and then it was read to him in the presence of all of us, and he made one or two corrections and then said it was true. He then stood up and solemnly administered the oath and John signed his name.

John Sierks is a typically feeble-minded man. He is not imbecile by any means, but he has the mind of a boy of about 10 years.

Memory Is Faulty. His memory is fair, but it has breaks in it. I cannot prove this in a few words, but I can prove it over and over with him. I am satisfied that it is true. Personally, I am satisfied that his confession, as he gave it, is true in all its main features, but it is not true in all its details. From what Dr. Steiner tells me and what the attendants in the hospital said as well as from what he said to me, it is certain that he has been rehearsing to himself over and over again the story of Pender's conviction and the grounds or evidence on which it rested. He tried to tell Mr. MacLaren before he broke down about Pender's getting the mail at Scappoose and it was an awkward effort. The story of the revolver and Pender's getting it out of Riley and Hassen's cabin had also not fixed as part of his mental furniture to save him from getting "pinched," as he puts it.

I doubt very much if Sierks got the revolver out of Riley and Hassen's cabin. He had told me earlier in the day of his own or his father's 38-caliber Colt's revolver, but in making his confession I think he substituted his long-planned and often-rehearsed story of Pender for the actual facts, only putting in himself instead of Pender.

Of course, I can't prove this, but Sierks' memory is undoubtedly defective, and when it comes to the problem of life that an adult must meet, works like an imperfect or slightly broken machine.

John Sierks is an insane in the usual sense of the word. He is weak-minded, as Dr. Steiner and all the attendants agree. There are quite a number of these feeble-minded people in the asylum and they are more uncertain in their conduct than the insane. There is no power of inhibition apparently and so, in practical conduct, they show no morality or sense of right. At the same time, in their placid quiet moments, they know right from wrong and are religious and good.

Sierks is of the same type as Tronson, only Sierks is more vicious and uncertain in his conduct. The asylum records describe him as a moral imbecile and he is such an unfortunate because his mind is lacking, is weak and broken and always will be.

The only hope of society is to confine all these feeble-minded persons who show any tendencies toward criminality. They should be confined for the additional reason that they may not leave children, who are certain to be like their parents.

AUTO KNOCKS GIRL DOWN Six-Year-Old Bruised Badly by Car Driven by H. C. Ewing.

The 6-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Max Kane, 203 1/2 Sheridan street, was bruised and badly frightened by the automobile when she was knocked down by an automobile driven by H. C. Ewing, 698 Knott street. Mr. Ewing took the child to the County Hospital, where she was removed to her home.

Witnesses said that the child tried to run across the street in front of the automobile. The machine struck her before it could be stopped.

NEARLY 300 HEAR EVANGELIST SPEAK

People From 11 Churches at First Union Meeting Held in New Tabernacle.

SONG SERVICE CONDUCTED

Rev. Mr. Bulgui Outlines Campaign for Month and Says He Will Hew to Line and Intends to Preach Long Sermons.

Union evangelistic meetings opened Sunday night at the tabernacle, East Eleventh and Belmont streets, with an attendance of nearly 300, mostly from the congregations of the 11 churches back of the campaign. An inspiring song service, lasting 30 minutes, was conducted by Professor George L. Rose with a choir of about 250 voices. It is planned to make the music a feature of all the meetings. Mr. and Mrs. Rose sang a duet with fine effect.

Words of welcome were spoken by Rev. W. O. Shank, who also introduced Rev. E. J. Bulgui, who will lead the meetings, and his assistants. Rev. Mr. Shank asked the co-operation of all the churches in the campaign.

"I am not here to find fault nor scare people," said Rev. Mr. Bulgui, as he began his address. "I am here to come to ask you to accept of Jesus Christ in direct words."

No Stories to Be Told. "I don't expect to tell any death-bed stories to scare people into the kingdom, for that class don't last. I expect to tell you the story of the man who had faith where they may, and if some of you brethren get hit I can't help that. You will hear no stories, and I expect to use language that will offend no one."

"I expect to preach long sermons. If anybody gets filled before I am through, they can leave, as that is evidence that they have all their intellectual capacity contain. Again, I want to get acquainted, and if anybody wants me to dinner, just invite me and see if I'll come."

After a duet from Mr. and Mrs. Rose, Rev. Mr. Bulgui spoke from the text, "What Think Ye of Christ?" which he said, was addressed to those who had intellectual capacity contain. Again, I want to get acquainted, and if anybody wants me to dinner, just invite me and see if I'll come."

Final Plans Are Made. At a meeting of all committees in the afternoon final arrangements were made for the evangelistic campaign for the month. Rev. Mr. Bulgui outlined the campaign.

"I work by faith," he said. "We have problems. We have to face Portland wrapped up in its commercialism, and the women tied up by society and fads, but God is on our side and we will not get discouraged. We shall win out."

He announced that during the week there will be afternoon meetings Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday at 7 o'clock.

Mrs. George L. Rose will meet the women of the churches Tuesday afternoon at 2 o'clock in the tabernacle to arrange for prayer meetings, of which she will be in charge. There will be no services Saturday night. It was voted to begin the meetings in the evening at 7:30 with a song service by the choir. Rev. Mr. Bulgui announced that the meetings will close promptly at 8:30 o'clock.

Meetings Not Dress Affairs. "I want it understood that this is not a dress affair," said Rev. Mr. Bulgui. "Women should be dressed in common apparel and men may come in overalls and gumboots. The Lord don't care about your dress. He wants your souls. We want the women to take their shoes off."

A restroom has been provided for mothers with babies where they can be taken if they cry. Arrangements will be made for the judicial committee and the various starting groups, the Elks and the different business houses of Portland, and we want a personal workers class of from 20 to 50 from each church.

Rev. Mr. Bulgui announced that the collections will be to meet the current expenses and pay for erection of the tabernacle. Over its snowy, sparkling list or his assistants. The tabernacle was warm and comfortable and well lighted. The stoves will be kept going night and day to remove the dampness in the lumber.

ORPHEUM BILL CLEVER

ALICE EIS AND BERT FRENCH DO NOVEL ACT IN SOAP BUBBLES. Eleanor Haber in "The Office Lady" Tickers Fancy of Audience and Several Others Are Good.

BY LEONNE CASS BAER. Right out of the best of high-blowed soap bubbles, glistening like sea foam and as luscious-looking as cake frosting, dances fascinating Alice Eis in the role of a temptress. Straight into the arms of the waiting-to-be-tempted Bert French she dances in a series of whirly catches, swings and twirls in mid-air.

From a bank she sucks a nodding crimson poppy and crushes it against the nostrils of her unwilling captive when he resists her dancing wiles and withers of smiles. Then, she once lured by poppy bloom, she bids him leap into the billowy foam and sends her own lovely spirited self after him. Oh, such a Monday!

Over its snowy, sparkling bubbles rainbow lights dance, the spray clings to the unbound tresses of the slender little Eis girl—and floats on the air. No wonder the bubbles are copy-righted. They're a sensation all by themselves. The bubbles and the Eleanor Haber act topped the excellent bill at the Orpheum.

There's a young actress on the bill who is related to Portland. She is Eleanor Haber and, although she is a San Franciscan, her family affiliations and her various starring tours on the Pacific Coast have made her well-known in Portland. She is a delightful comedienne and her act is inspirational rather than the usual low-down directions sort. Miss Haber, with her own little company, has a sketch called "The Office Lady."

obliged. A real tragedy happens and the girl has a chance to put her theories into practice and save the name of her employer's wife. There's plenty of comedy in the little sketch and Miss Haber puts over keen little slangy epigrams that keep the laughs rippling in the mind of artisty Elisa Ruogger is one of the most important names in the realm of music in vaudeville. She is a "cellist of distinction and rare ability." Unusually her programmes are delightful. The trio of selections, Lalo's "Reverie," "Ave Maria" from Bach-Gounod, and Poper's airy fairy "Butterfly," brought storms of applause, to which she generously responded with "I hear you calling me." Madame Ruogger's husband, Edmund Lichpley, a director of note, plays violin accompaniments and directs the orchestra for her act.

Gay Anna Chandler, with a wealth of original fun which she puts into her songs and a penchant for war ballads and topical verse, makes herself a prime favorite. Anna's songs and her chatter have a punch and a rippling plus. A novel act is offered by Jack E. Gardner in a motion picture travesty, "Curse You, Jack Dalton," which Gardner plays to the hilt. Lots of mirth to this, and it's new.

Truly a dare-devil is a slim, black-haired one of the four Danubes, who are casting merrily, Edmund Lichpley and his act, but to this one Danube goes the cream of the applause, for his whirly and mad twirlings while flying from one to another pair of fairy wings, and his opening the bill is Mortimer McEae, a "narrow feller" of the bike, with Gertrude Cleger billed as "the perfect girl." Ed and Gertrude are a cycle and are post-graduates in its tricks.

Two youthful automobile robbers held up Miss Rose Pankner Sunday night near Twenty-second and Overton streets and escaped with a silver mesh purse containing $10. The robbery took place just after Miss Pankner had left a street car for her home at Twenty-first and Overton streets.

Miss Pankner got off a Twenty-third street car at Overton street about 11 o'clock and walked along Overton street to Twenty-second street. As she neared the corner, a small automobile approached in Twenty-second street. It stopped at the curb and another, and about 15 years old, jumped from it and accosted Miss Pankner.

"I'll shoot if you scream," he said. Miss Pankner screamed, anyway. The boy snatched her purse and jumped back into the car, which sped off down Twenty-second street.

Rev. Mr. Bulgui ran to a nearby house. From there she telephoned the police. Detectives Hellyer and Tackabery a short time later arrested two boys riding on a bicycle after an exciting chase for several miles, but Miss Pankner failed to identify them, and they explained their flight satisfactorily. They were released.

PRESS CLUB PLAN DARK SURPRISE IN STORE FOR JINKS NEXT FRIDAY NIGHT.

Music, Vaudeville and Starliner Not Yet Announced to Make Things Hum—Meeting Today.

An executive session of the entertainment committee having been called today, it is believed that a big surprise for the jinks to be held next Friday night is contemplated. Music a-plenty will be provided, stellar and vaudeville acts will be presented and the usual alfresco refreshments will be served. Detailed announcement of the big act of the jinks will not be made until the meeting of the committee on Friday.

As in the December jinks all members of the Press Club will be permitted to bring several friends to the entertainment Friday night. Every member of the club will be new, accompanied by a man friend, will be obliged to enter the clubrooms by the side door. Enforcement of this rule will be left to the reception committee.

It has been announced by the entertainment committee that all entertainers in the jinks will be new, and that pretty girl singers, musicians and dancers will predominate as heretofore.

Frank Coffinberry made such a hit as an announcer in the pre-holiday jinks he will be called upon to preside again Friday night. There will be no speechmaking and no innovations will be made in the program of the entertainers at 8:30 o'clock that they may share in the good time before the vaudeville part of the programme begins.

HYPNOTIST'S ACT SCREAM

Barnum Makes Subjects Do Ridiculous Stunts at Heilig Theater.

Barnum, the hypnotist, demonstrated last night at the Heilig theater the latest in his line of work, the "showman." The audience divided its time between laughing to exhaustion and applauding.

With the cooperation of two tests, when one subject drove a spike through a two-inch plank with his hand and when another subject with just his teeth and shoulders touching him up four men, the performance was extremely humorous.

While there was plenty to embarrass the subjects, there was nothing to draw the most sensitive of the spectators.

A cake walk comes with subjects in ridiculous costumes taking the parts of women and men dressed in demonstration. One subject was trying to kiss his partner, who had been awakened by Barnum, and the embarrassment of the latter, who could not escape, may be imagined.

There were 15 numbers on the programme, all interesting. Barnum will return January 21, to remain for a week's engagement.

BANK CURB IS ADVOCATED Right of Superintendent to Refuse Charters Proposed.

ST. PAUL, Dec. 31.—Six hundred representatives of Minnesota state banks met at the Hotel Wentworth here today, with but one dissenting vote, in favor of the enactment by the Legislature of a law giving to some board of commissioners the power to issue bank charters when in their opinion the organization of such bank or banks would be detrimental to the best interests of the people.

J. CARRANZA CAPTIVE BROTHER OF MEXICAN LEADER VICTIM OF TREACHERY. Release Terms Refused and His Staff Are Executed—General's Answer Order to Pursue the Enemy.

VERA CRUZ, Jan. 4.—General Jesus Carranza, brother of Venustiano Carranza, is being held a prisoner by General Santibanez on the Isthmus of Tehuantepec. General Santibanez shot Carranza's entire staff, except his son, Abelardo Carranza, and Ignacio Perardi. They also are held captives.

The execution of the members of the staff took place after General Alfonso Santibanez had failed to induce Venustiano Carranza to make terms for their release.

General Venustiano Carranza here when he was made the victim of the treachery of Santibanez. The greater part of his force had been sent forward from Santa Cruz over the Tehuantepec Railway. Carranza and his staff, who were traveling in the rear, were overpowered at San Geronimo.

A series of telegrams purporting to have been signed by Jesus Carranza, but which, it is believed, were sent by Santibanez, were received by General Venustiano Carranza. The majority of these urged General Carranza not to move forces against the treachery of Santibanez and suggested that arrangements be made for his release. Only vague terms were specified by the sender of the messages, but apparently the condition most determinedly sought was that Santibanez be pardoned for his insubordination and be allowed to retain his old position.

General Venustiano Carranza declared that not even for the sake of his brother could he countenance any arrangement that would mean a military act on his own initiative might make, and after a day of receiving messages, signed in the name of Jesus Carranza, but apparently sent by the one who was holding him prisoner, he ordered a movement of troops that resulted in a sharp engagement at Cheleva station, on the Tehuantepec Railway.

Little difficulty was encountered by the loyal troops in defeating the rebels under Santibanez, but later it was learned that Santibanez had shot all those whom he had arrested, with the exception of Carranza and his son and Perardi. These he carried away with him to some place in the mountains of the Isthmus.

Orders have been issued to pursue the band as far as possible, regardless of consequences for the prisoners. Santibanez was chief of the army in the Isthmus.

We are a Nation of meat eaters and our blood is filled with uric acid, says a well-known authority, who warns us to be constantly on guard against kidney trouble.

The kidneys do their utmost to free the blood of this irritating acid, but become weak from the overwork; the bladder sluggish; the eliminative tissues clog and thus the waste is retained in the blood to poison the entire system.

When your kidneys ache and feel like lumps of lead, and you have stinging pains in the back or the urine is cloudy, full of sediment, or the bladder is irritable, obliging you to seek relief during the night; when you have severe headaches, nervous and dizzy spells, sleeplessness, acid stomach or rheumatism in bad weather, get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast each morning and in a few days your kidneys will act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate clogged kidneys, to neutralize the acids in urine so it is no longer a source of irritation, thus ending urinary and bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is inexpensive and cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink, and nobody can make a mistake by taking a little occasionally to keep the kidneys clean and active.—Adv.
