(Mendelssoin-Lisat), Miss Ada Taylor, address, Dr. Luther R. Dyott; vocal sole, "Hecame I Love You, Dear" (Hawley), Miss
Dorris E. Bagley; college songs; the charter day cake.

Dorris E. Bagier; college songs; the charter day cake.
Rev. Mr. Dyott said, in part:
"We are here with great appreciation
in our hearts of the past, the present and the future, in relation to this important institution of learning.
"As we look back to the early morning of Pacific University we see a woman, Mrs. Tabitha Moffett Brown, who, a widow, at the mature age of 70 years, came to Oregon with the fam-

70 years, came to Oregon with the fam-70 years, came to Oregon with the family of her son. Soon after her arrival in this land of promise she became known to all the Willamette Valley as 'Grandma Brown.' At length she opened a school and home for the orphans of the pioneers. She became a mother to a score of these children and gathered her little brood together into a home and school in the old log meeting-house marked by the petrified stump on your campus.

stump on your campus The neighbors donated furniture "The neighbors donated furniture, bedding and provisions. This was in the year 1847. Early in 1848, during the exodus to the gold fields of California, Mrs. Brown's "children" so increased that larger accommodations became necessary. Then Tualatin Academy was organized, which absorbed Mrs. Brown's orphanage. This in turn became the nucleus out of which the college had its birth.

"Rev. Harvey Clark came to Oregon in 1841, as an independent missionary in 1841, as an independent missionary to the Indians. He settled upon his land claim, on which Forest Grove is now built. Mr. Clark donated 200 acres of his land as a "foundation fund," and later another large tract to assist in paying teachers. "Rev. George H. Atkinson, with his young wife, in June, 1848, reached Oregon City. He was sent by the National Home Missionary Society. Dr. Atkinson and Mr. Clark began the school which has grown into Pacific University. Dr. Atkinson wisely selected Sidney Harper Marsh, a young Ver-monter, to become the head of this promising institution.

Thus Pacific University began, Mention might be made of many others who have made important contribu-tions to the growth and usefulness of this school. Time forbids, but appreciative memory will not forget men like President Ferring and Frank M. Warren, Sr., and their loyalty and con-secration to the interests of Pacific University.

Pacific University is not a luxury, but a necessity, in the continued development of the Pacific Northwest. Our student body should by no means be confined to this part of the country. The conventional East should send its young men and women to the West, where they can be just as well educated by a school like this, and a taste of life out here will be of immense value in giving them an appetite for bigger and broader life."

CORONER PROBES KILLING

by Herzig Was Accidental.

HILLSEORO, Or., Jan. 13.—(Special.)
—Coroner Barrett yesterday held an inquest on the body of Joseph Shallberger, who was killed by Ulrich Hersig, at Beaverton Sunday night.
Teddy Shallberger, a brother of the dead man, testified that he thought that the gun held by Herzig was accidentally discharged. The father of Shallberger also said he did not think the shooting was intentional. Both, however, swore that the shooting took place so suddenly that they have no clear recollection of the event. The brother says that they had argued over the European war several times that give wide berths to mined areas and if possible keep out of the track of floating mines, as the latter are said

to have been scattered so numerously
as to be a menace to navigation, now

floated around the Coast of England
recently.

When Great Britain first assembled
