

SUPPLY BILLS MAY FAIL THIS SESSION

Prospect for Passage of General Appropriations by Congress Diminishes.

15 MEASURES IN SENATE

Only Six Weeks Left in Which Present Body May Enact Laws and Oppose Against Several Will Consume Time.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 18.—Fears that no general legislation, including the Government ship purchase bill, can be passed in the Senate before adjournment of Congress by March 4 are now being supplemented by apprehension on the part of Administration leaders that some of the general supply bills also will fail unless a plan can be devised to expedite legislative business that has been dragging at a snail-like pace for several weeks.

Fifteen appropriation bills, including the District of Columbia measure, with its prohibition rider, now before the Senate, are to be disposed of within six weeks, if the necessity of adopting joint resolutions to continue existing appropriations to the end of the fiscal year is not met.

Some Democratic leaders have become extremely pessimistic over the outlook, remembering that the naval and military bills and the rivers and harbors measure, all of them certain to develop opposition and to precipitate debate, are yet to be considered. None of these has even passed the House, although arrangements have been made to finish the rivers and harbors bill in the House next Tuesday.

OLD OREGON CREW INVITED

Men Who Made Trip Around Horn May Go Through Canal.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 18.—All honorably discharged sailors who made the historic trip around Cape Horn with Captain Clark on the Oregon in the early days of the Spanish-American war will have an opportunity to pass through the Panama Canal at the formal opening of the great waterway next March.

Secretary Daniels authorized today Captain J. M. Reeves, the present commander of the Oregon to enlist all who made the former trip to form part of the crew in the trip the Oregon will soon make through the Panama Canal and return to San Francisco. The former ship commander, now Rear Admiral Clark, although not in command of the ship, will be a guest of honor on her deck when she heads the procession through the isthmian waterway.

While the old sailors to make this trip will have to present themselves at San Diego and enlist for a year, arrangements will be made for the discharge of all who wish to quit when the Oregon gets back to the coast of California. They will have to pay their own traveling expenses to and from the ship.

GENERAL STOESEL DEAD

Defender of Port Arthur Long Sufferer From Paralysis.

LONDON, Jan. 18.—The death of Lieutenant-General Anatole Mikailovitch Stoessel, the defender of Port Arthur, is announced in a Petrograd dispatch to Reuters. The Russian General Stoessel had suffered from paralysis for several months.

Lieutenant-General Stoessel was famous as the commander of the Russian troops at Port Arthur during the Russo-Japanese war. After he had held out there for months against the furious onslaught of the Japanese, Stoessel, his ammunition all but exhausted and his men virtually without food, surrendered the fortress to General Nochi. For this he was condemned to death on February 23, 1905, by a court-martial. This sentence, however, was commuted by Emperor Nicholas to 10 years' imprisonment.

He was released from confinement from the fortress of St. Peter and St. Paul the following year by order of Emperor Nicholas.

800,000 ALLIES CAPTIVES

German Paper Gives Number, Saying Teuton Prisoners Are 200,000.

AMSTERDAM, Jan. 16.—(Correspondence of the Associated Press.)—Official reports say prisoners of war in Germany and Austria now number 800,000. The Cologne Gazette compares this figure with 200,000 prisoners, which, it asserts, are held by the allies.

The German official report gives the following figures of prisoners interned in Germany: French, 345,000; British, 295,000; Russian, 357,000; American, 206,294; Belgians, 612,000; Italian, 35,552; British, 425,000; 18,555 men.

These totals do not include prisoners now en route to concentration camps or a portion of those captured in Russian Poland. The Austrian prisoners are estimated at 200,000.

The total of 800,000 is more than double the total of the Franco-Prussian war.

GUARD COLONEL RECALLED

Major Charles H. Martin Ordered to Service With His Regiment.

Information has reached National Guard headquarters that under the law it will be impossible for an interpretation to be given which will allow Major Charles H. Martin, United States Army, to remain longer on duty with the Third Oregon Infantry as its commander. Senator Chamberlain has forwarded the explanation that the War Department must insist that Major Martin serve with his regiment for two years.

Among those mentioned whose appointment to the command would be acceptable are: Lieutenant-Colonel Dentler, Major Morris and Major Mac Alexander, all of whom are said to be available.

MARCUS LOEW CRITICISED

Melvin G. Winstock Takes Exception to Prediction as to Movies.

When Marcus Loew, vaudeville magnate, said: "I believe the motion picture business generally is on the downgrade; . . . by this I mean the long film is doomed," he started something. Melvin G. Winstock, manager of the National Theater, took his pen in hand, figuratively speaking, and yesterday offered to do verbal battle with Mr. Loew.

"If for one will not sit idly by and stand any unfounded talk, even from as big a man as Marcus Loew," Mr. Winstock said. "If Mr. Loew had said he was here because his brand of vaudeville needed the master's hand, that's his business. But, every man who has brains to comprehend and eyes to see knows that motion pictures are but at the threshold of achievement and that each day wins new supporters. Each week sees at least 200 original productions in the United States alone.

"State men, authors, educators, dramatists and actors all agree with me as to the power, influence and popularity of motion pictures. This vaudeville magnate stands alone in his opinion.

"I have no desire to predict disaster for any man in business, but let the public hold its breath for the next few months and watch the survival of the fittest. It will find that the last form of commercialized amusement to get on the downgrade will be the movies."

MISS BONNIE TO RETURN

BAKER STAR TO APPEAR SOON IN "THE DAWN OF A TOMORROW."

Interpretation of "Glad" Creates Sensation in Spokane and She Will Be Featured Here.

As Glad, in "The Dawn of a Tomorrow," Miss Cora Belle Bonnie will return to Portland as leading woman of the Portland Baker Players, the week of January 31. It was announced last week that George L. Baker had recalled Miss Bonnie to Portland as a result of her sensational success in "The Dawn of a Tomorrow" in Spokane two weeks ago.

Miss Bonnie opened the Portland season last Fall and in November was sent to Spokane temporarily to open the new Baker Company there. The company was housed at the Auditorium, the leading theater in Spokane, and although arrangements have been made to finish the rivers and harbors bill in the House next Tuesday.

Some Democratic leaders have become extremely pessimistic over the outlook, remembering that the naval and military bills and the rivers and harbors measure, all of them certain to develop opposition and to precipitate debate, are yet to be considered. None of these has even passed the House, although arrangements have been made to finish the rivers and harbors bill in the House next Tuesday.

HIGHBROW WORM DEAD

HARVARD PRODIGY GIVES LIFE TO VINDICATE PROFESSOR.

Capacity for Education Proved by Dissection of Worm Between Comfort and Peril in Laboratory.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Jan. 18.—(Special.)—Harvard's educated worm is dead, according to an announcement made by its tutor, Professor R. Myrkes. The worm has had a decent burial. Overstudy caused his death.

Before "Pete" matriculated in the psychological laboratory of Professor Yerkes he was leading an idle and dissolute life in a Cambridge barmy. Professor Yerkes gave "Pete" an education in an effort to prove that worms have intelligence. Charles Darwin thus argued and Miss Elise Hanel, a German student, undertook to disprove it. That caused Professor Yerkes to rig a tube shaped like a "T" for "Pete" to wriggle in. The right arm of the "T" led to a comfortable burrow of wet blotting paper. The other arm led to wires that would give "Pete" an electric shock. Sandpaper also discouraged "Pete" from making a trip the wrong way.

It took many trials for him to discover which road led to worm paradise, but the professor finally trained him so that he could make the trip 20 times a day. Seldom did he fail to go the right way. Once he was kept out of the "T" tube for a month and the first time he was put back he remembered which was the road to comfort and which to danger. In all he made more than a thousand wriggles through the tube.

DIVA DELIGHTS AGAIN

Mme. Jomelli One of Seven Attractions at Orpheum.

DANCING ACTS ARE CLEVER

Mr. and Mrs. Crane Do Novel Gildes, While Paul Armstrong's "Woman Proposes" Pleases—Miss Ball Charms With Violin.

BY LEONE CARR BAER.

Someone on his way out of the Orpheum Sunday night said the "bill is a feast." It isn't. It's better than a feast. It's a banquet of seven wonderfully good courses—just what the vaudeville fater ordered for this particular week—and at the last moment Chef Martin Beck added a Jomelli appetizer.

The marvelous voice of Jomelli is heard in silence wherein we can hear the proverbial pin drop. The applause that follows the last lingering note and the rapt attention given the prima donna's songs must let her know of the rare pleasure she sends out with her glorious voice. Two new songs, one an operatic aria and the other a love song in English, have been added to the singer's repertoire. Again she gave "Home Sweet Home" and "Lullaby" with infinite charm and magnetism. Her lovely true high notes are an evening's joy and make a memory.

Mrs. Douglas Crane, who dances with Douglas Crane in a series of original dances, has youth and happiness and the love of dance impressed in her lithe, graceful body, in her twinkling toes, her adorable smile and her slender arms. In a gown of rose color and a saucy wee bonnet she dances right into our hearts and sets up a claim. Of course Douglas Crane is a most excellent dancer too—quite the best man dancer we've had in ages of modern steps, but it is in the twinkling of Mrs. D. C. who holds the eye continually.

Their Crane Skip is a whimsical rapid swirling that is distinctly new. So, too, is their California one-step. Bright and ingenious to the point of positive brilliance is the Paul Armstrong one-act satire "Woman Proposes." On the theory that no man willingly proposes marriage, and that nine out of ten are lambs led to slaughter Mr. Armstrong has written a humorous and delightful satire. Fortunately for his keen lines a company of clever people present it. Ruth Allen, an artistic comedienne, and George Keely, a most capable actor, have fun individually and together, have the principal roles. Three lively girls and a trio of men, all finished actors, support the leads.

A violin virtuoso who understands vaudeville's requirements is Rae Eleanor Ball, a gracious maiden in a cake-frosting gown. She fiddles divinely and joyously rambles from the classic to the class.

A return act, but changed considerably, is Dorothy Brenner and Bernard Wheeler in their "Candy Booth" non-sensical. Dorothy is cunning and capable in her role of a mischievous "kiddie." Milt Collins as the Speaker of the House plays hob with the fish market, takes a jab at W. J. B. and dozens of others and gathers laughs. Opening the bill is a pantomime by Frank Hughes and Beth Stone in which the acrobatic toe dancing of Miss Stone is sensational.

Newhouse, Snyder & Company, a trio of daring comedy cyclists, close the bill in a gale of laughter. The maneuvers of the messenger boy cyclist, the amazing leaps of another of the trio and the general excellence of the act put it above others almost like it.

MORGAN TO VISIT WILSON

Financier and President to Discuss Alaskan Railway Problems.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 18.—J. Pierpont Morgan will have a conference tomorrow with President Wilson and Secretary Lane, of the Interior Department. The chief object of his coming is said to be to discuss Alaskan railroad problems, with particular reference to the Copper River and Northwestern Railroad, which Mr. Morgan has offered to sell to the Government for use as a part of the railway authorized by Congress last March to connect the Alaskan Coast with the coal fields.

Under the law the President is authorized to select the route of the line and whether the entire road shall be built or whether any existing roads shall be purchased as links in the system. The Alaskan engineering commission, which made surveys of all possible routes, including that covered by the Morgan road, already has held one conference with the President and is now completing its report. Mr. Morgan discussed the Alaskan situation with Secretary Lane several months ago and at the time offered to sell his line to the Government.

When Nero Fiddled and Rome Burned

On a certain July midnight, nearly two thousand years ago, the capital of the mighty Roman Empire lay slumbering peacefully amidst the sculptured slopes of its seven hills. The sluggish Tiber slipped silently along the southern walls, unheeded by sail or oar, to mingle its tawny waters with the blue Tyrrhenian Sea. There was no moon—no shine of stars.

A thick murk, so dense as to be almost tactile, filled the endless reaches of space and enshrouded the city as with a pall. There was no stir of life—no sound—no movement of man or beast—no rustle of leaf or twig—only the awful stillness of a corpse-like world.

Suddenly, in one corner of the great Circus Maximus—in a little wooden booth used by the jugglers and mountebanks of the day—a slender, yellow tongue of flame shot out from a crack in the wall and licked its way to the roof. Crawling slowly along, it crept from board to board till the flimsy structure burst into blaze. The next booth followed, and the next; and soon the mighty edifice of the Circus itself became an heat of lambent fire. The nude form of an Ethiopian, glided from an alley in the rear, darted into the Appian Way, and ran swiftly toward the Esquiline Hill, where frowned the palace of the infamous Nero.

Breathless, he reached the heavily armed sentinel who stood on guard. A sign, a word, and he passed into the lofty hall, where a slave guided him to the tyrant's couch. Prostrating himself on the ground, he pointed to the southern heavens, which by this time were lurid with the flames of conflagration sweeping the world's proudest city, Imperial Rome.

Nero was evidently expectant of the event, for, spurning the slave with his foot, he summoned his attendants and bade them bring his lyre, his garlands and his festal garments. Arraying himself as was his wont in Grecian theaters, he stepped forth, smote the strings and danced a grotesque figure to the measured rhythm of the music. His eyes gleamed with a wild insanity—and his gibbered speech was that of a madman.

For six days and seven nights the city burned while the last of the Caesars fiddled and made merry with his drunken favorites.

BOY PLUNGES TO DEATH

LAD OF 13 TOPPLES FROM BRIDGE AT SPRINGFIELD.

Youth Climbs to Top of Span in Play, Grabs High-Voltage Wire and Drops 40 Feet to Rocks.

SPRINGFIELD, Or., Jan. 18.—(Special.)—Lawrence, the 13-year-old son of ex-Mayor and Mrs. Welby Stevens, was killed at 4:30 this afternoon when he fell from the Portland, Eugene & Eastern bridge across the Willamette River here to a gravel bar 40 feet below.

He was leading a party of five boys in a game of "follow the leader" and had gone up to the top of the wooden girders of the first span. According to one of the boys, he sat down on the girder and reached his hand out to a nearby wire, one of the three of the Eugene municipal power plant high line carrying 36,000 volts. He writhed in the air for a moment and then dropped face downward on the rocks.

The first person the boys found on the street when they ran to give the alarm was the lad's sister, Helen, who carried the news to her mother. Postmaster Harry Stewart and J. L. Clark waded a branch of the river and brought the all but lifeless form up town.

The boy had celebrated his 13th birthday yesterday.

Baby's Happiness Depends on Health

Cross, fretful babies usually need a laxative to make them comfortable, and comfort begets happiness. Constipation is the cause of much discomfort. Mothers should watch closely the condition of their children's bowels and see that they are regular.

A mild, pleasant-tasting laxative such as Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is ideal for children because of its natural composition and gentle action, and because it contains no opiate, narcotic or other harmful habit-forming drug.
