HUNDREDS of women of the diocese of Oregon gathered at Trinity parish house yesterday to meet Mr. Rev. Walter T. Sumner. Owing to the death of his father, which occurred yesterday, the bishop only attended the reception long enough to greet the women of the different auxiliaries. The affair was planned by the Women's Auxiliary of the diocese of Oregon, and the president of the various auxiliaries received the guests, assisted by Mrs. Thayer, vice-president. Presiding at the tea table, which was attractive and well-attended, were Mrs. Charles F. Adams, Mrs. Walter J. Burns, Mrs. S. E. Joseph, Miss Suerlock and Mrs. Samuel Adair.

One of the most interesting and important social events of today among the younger set is the dance for which Mr. and Mrs. W. D. Paslay were hosts Tuesday evening at their home in Irvington. Evergreens and ferns arranged artistically about the rooms made a beautiful setting for the gowns of the women. Mrs. Arthur Bahn, of Albany, gave clever readings, and a feature of the affair was an elaborate caterer's luncheon, the menu being the piece de resistance, shipped from Arkansas, the hosts' former home. Those present were: Mr. and Mrs. Roy Thompson, Mrs. Wm. C. R. Miller, Mr. and Mrs. Carlyle Travis, Dr. and Mrs. Lake, Dr. and Mrs. Van Cleve, Mrs. A. J. Bahn, Albany; Dr. Arthur Thompson, Mrs. E. E. Yelding, Miss Leah Eastham, Miss Roach, Miss Ella Thompson, Miss Pearl Montgomery, Howard Lee, Lynn Eastham, William Hessian and Mr. and Mrs. W. D. Paslay.

DORIS BLAKE'S ADVICE.

HE GOES "JOY RIDING." DEAR MISS BLAKE: I am in love with a young man and think a great deal of him, but I don't want to let him know I love him. He tells me that I don't care for him, and asks what is the use of coming over to see me. How can I show my love to him? He is an expert driver and he works for his own automobile and he takes his boss out "joy riding" and neglects me. Would you advise me to stay home or go out? He is jealous of me, and always asks me where I have been. We were keeping steady company before his boss bought a machine. Sometimes he comes to see me and hardly speaks, and when I ask what is the matter he tells me he is tired because he doesn't get home sometimes until 11:30 P. M. "DOLLY."

Do not stay in the house while he is out having a good time. Go out and have a good time yourself. Be as cheerful as you can when he comes to see you. No man likes to have a woman unhappy when he calls upon her. If he works hard and is up until almost midnight you cannot expect him to be as cheerful as he might be under other circumstances. Do not let him monopolize your time, however. Have other callers. Be a little independent of him.

Asked Her Age.

"Dear Miss Blake: I have been keeping steady company with a very nice young man for the last four months, whom I am learning to care for very much. When away on his vacation he sent me some of the nicest letters, telling me how much he loves me. I heard that there is another girl at work he would like to go out with and has made an engagement with her. Hearing it, made me feel bad about it, so I told her I was keeping steady company with him. She told me that she would not go out with him, because she expects to be married soon. My friend has heard that I know about this engagement. What should I say to him in case he brings it up? I was out with him last night and coming home he acted so strange and he asked me how old I was and I told him, which makes me five years and nine months younger than he. He said that I was too young to go with him, but I really look four years older than I am. Do you think he cares for me more if he says that? Do you think I am too young to go with him? I am afraid he will not go with me. If he doesn't come this week, as usual, should I invite him up?" "F. B."

The young man probably has come to the conclusion that he will not go with you. He is afraid you will not go with him. If he doesn't come this week, as usual, should I invite him up?" "F. B."

Forms of Female Intemperance.

A WOMAN said to me the other day, and there was just a little ring of self-satisfaction in her voice: "I am so rushed this winter, I scarcely have time to breathe. Monday morning is my current events class. Monday afternoon an Ibsen Club. Wednesday, the meeting of the Browning. Then we've formed a Dramatic Club—really it is a comfort to go back to the old writers—and now a friend wants me to join a little crowd that's going in for a study of some of the modern playwrights. One ought to take an interest in the drama, you know." That woman is a sister to him who "looketh upon the wine when it is red," isn't she? By the time she has crowded a review of the events of the week, an extract of Ibsen, Browning, Dickens, Shaw et al, into her head, her brains will be in as confused a whirl as are his who has been dining on hot birds and cold bottles. And if she keeps it up, she will be, in the course of time, as complete a physical wreck. Not all intemperance is confined to the wet and dry issue that comes to the polls. Many a woman is intellectually intemperate. Perhaps we do not have so much of this intemperance as we did have when the wave of reading and study clubs and classes of various kinds first swept over the country. But even yet there are women whom it is touching for the first time, and who are carried off their feet by it. Perhaps they have been hungry for this sort of thing and the wealth of it offered them looks so good they cannot bear to let a single morsel of it get away. But intellectual intemperance is not the only form of intemperance women indulge in. A friend is addicted to what I would call housekeeping intemperance. She sweeps and dusts and scrubs and washes and cooks beyond all necessity for these things. She seems possessed with a mania for cleaning.

Use Pelican Brand Molasses Highest Price. Highest Quality

She goes at it as a man to his cups. When to everyone her house seems immaculate, she will say with decision, "The house is a sight. I must sweep it tomorrow all over." And with vigor she attacks it the next day and rugs and furniture and curtains are beaten and crushed and shaken as if an army that had been in possession for years had to be routed by nightfall.

Other women are addicted to shopping intemperance. The call of the shops is to them as the bright lights and swinging doors to many a man. Every morning they saunter forth. Every night they come home weary and worn, their hands full of packages, with more to follow in delivery wagons. Closets and trunks are full of dress patterns, never made up, their consciences eased by the thought they were secured as bargains. Their bureau drawers overflow with short lengths of silk and ribbons, with underwear and hosiery. And yet they buy on.
