Interview Is Obtained by Representative in United States Lower House of Congress, Who Finds Nation Still in Need.

He was accompanied by Pessan, the printer who was fined for printing the now famous pastoral letter of the archbishop. Describing his interview with the prelate, Mr.

Scott said:

"Cardinal Mercier lives in a fine old palace. The thremeroom has a big hole in the roof and this, with other holes in the walls, to say nothing of broken windows, tells the story of stray shells which fell around the palace. No German soldiers were seen on guard.

Cardinal Enjoys Situation.

"The Cardinal obviously enjoys the dilemma in which he has placed the Germans. His eyes twinkled as he told the story of his intest adventure. At 6 o'clock one morning, said the arch-bishop, a German officer and two sol-diers brought a communication from the commander asking him to deny statements that he had been deprived statements that he had been deprived, which had been prepared consisted of four or five typewritten sheets.

"Cardinal Mercier said he requested his callers to return in the evening for an answer, but the officer declared they must await a reply in the Cardinal's room. At the archhishop's request telephonic confirmation of this order was received. Describing his subsequent experiences, the Cardinal said:

"It is true no manacles were used to restrain me, but I was to have performed a service at Antwerp and was not permitted to go there. For three days I was restrained in my palace. Two days later I was asked to modify my letter, and wrote another. If the Germans are clever, they will publish my first pastoral."

Gratitude Conveyed to Americans. "The archbishop smiled as he made the final statement, Asked if he had any message for Americans, he said;
"Nothing except to give the people of your great country assurances of our gratitude. We would have starved had it not been for you. The work of your relief commission has been exceedingly

WASHINGTON, Feb. 1. - Official Washington is still puzzled over the formation here recently of a National German-American League, which has let it be known that its political in-fluence will be felt from now on, par-ticularly at the approaching Presiden-thal contest in the 1916 campaign. The league was called together by

The league was called together by Representative Bartholdt, a St. Louis member of the House, and it held an all-day session behind closed doors. After the meeting it was announced that the league would hereafter work to "re-establish a genuine American neutrality and to uphold it free from commercial, financial or political sub-commercial, financial or political sub-servience to foreign powers."

The formation of the new league took Washington somewhat by sur-prise. A few days before it was con-vened Mr. Bartholdt sent word around to all the papers that there would be some slight news value attached to the organization of the new Germanthe organization of the new German-American League. The real sting came in the last few paragraphs of the resolutions adopted by the league, which set forth that the league and its members "pledge themselves, individually and collectively, to support only auch candidates for public office, irrespective of party, who will place American interests above those of any other country, and who will aid in eliminating all undue foreign influences from official life."

One portion of official Washington feels that the league's statement virtually serves notice on the Administratually serves notice on the Administra-tion to look out for itself in 1916, unless the Administration supports Congressional measures now pending to prohibit the exportation of muni-tions of war to foreign countries.

Chat No. 6

I wonder if you remember that a day or so ago I spoke of the educational value of motion pictures. Alone those lines, it is really remarkable what a perfect knowledge of history we twentieth century folk are obtaining through the film camera. Possibly our historic stories may be a trifle exaggerated, but that does not detract from their force. Take for instance the story of "Mistress Nell," which delves deep into the romantic happenings surrounding Charles Stuart, of England.

Would it be possible to learn history in a more agreeable way than by watching MARY PICKFORD so charmingly live the life of Nell Gwyn, one-time idol of the theater and the King, as she does at the PEOPLES THEATER this week

Over at the STAR one gets a glimpse of the tragedies of penitentiary life as one sees the life of Charles E. Van Loan's desperado, "Buckshot John," being expiated for his early crimes. And a simply wonderful film of the Ancon passing through the Panama Canal.

Yes, I think you will enjoy and learn much from the bills at both the Peoples and the Star Theaters.
