"THE SANDMAN STORY FOR TONIGHT" by Mrs. F. A. Walker.

Marcel's Wish. MARCEL was a poor little hunchback. He sold papers when he could get them, and when he did not sleep any where he could find shelter and ate any thing he could find. When he had money he would buy a bed and a blanket for a few cents, and Marcel always liked to go there, for in the same house lived a poor old woman.

"Granny," as Marcel called her, was a poor old woman, but she managed to do enough work so that the woman who kept the lodging-house gave her a bed in the corner, and Marcel always had enough food to keep her from starving.

Marcel had a bed of straw next to Granny's and often when her pains came she would keep her awake, Marcel's back would be paining him and they would talk to each other, trying to forget their sufferings.

Granny was younger and had a warm dress and plenty of food and a good husband, and how the work took him from her and she was left to take care of the house. The time to come when she should join her "soldier boy," as she called her lost husband.

Granny could tell only of what he saw each day as he limped along the streets, for he remembered little of his early childhood.

But he could tell her where he often went, and about the grand people he saw driving in their carriages.

"There is a beautiful lady at the top of the fountain," he told Granny, "and she pours water from a pitcher she holds in her hand. If you get close to the fountain sometimes the spray will touch your face, and I am glad to see me smiling when I see her."

"I wonder if she is a fairy?" he asked Granny. "Sometimes she seems to smile at me, and I think I could never see her, but she is a little girl."

But little Marcel did not give up the idea that the beautiful lady of the fountain was a fairy, and he kept after her as he walked far and his back pained him more than usual, he went to the fountain and lay down beside it.

The cool grass eased his aching back and head, and the fountain lady seemed to know his face was hot, for the water sprinkled his face every few minutes.

"Oh fountain lady," he said, "Grant me one wish; just one." The fountain lady smiled and her lips parted. "What is it you wish?" she asked.

"It is for Granny I want you to speak to her," he said, "I think I grant the wish. She is so old and I think she will be very comfortable," he said.

DEFENSE AND ATTACK MADE AT ROTARIANS' LUNCHEON. Board of Trustees Asked to Pass on Subject of Regulation - Will M. Cressy, Actor, Tells Stories.

The jitney bus was defended and attacked at yesterday's noon luncheon of the Rotary Club. Joseph H. Page, ex-Deputy District Attorney, said that while it is not regulation that will stop the jitney, he believed that transportation has come to stay, he believes, and if the streetcar company were to tear up its tracks they would not be missed.

Both speakers favored regulation for the jitney and, upon motion of Frank C. Riggs, the subject was referred to the board of trustees of the club for recommendation.

Will M. Cressy, veteran actor on the Orpheum circuit, opened the programme with a number of stories, many of them being Jitney jokes.

Home Breakers. Sidney Conklin in two uproariously funny acts.

Who Got Stung? A sparkling comedy-drama.

Gratitude of Conductor 786. A romance of the pre-jitney age.
