GREATER EFFICIENCY IS FORECAST IN CLUB UNION

Julius L. Meier Thinks Consolidation Will Result in Saving of Time and Will Increase Confidence of Business Men in Subscribing to Work.

TALKS ON CONSOLIDATION. NO. 2. COMBINING of the Commercial Club and the Chamber of Commerce to gain better co-operation in the executive committee approval of all business interests, said Julius L. Meier yesterday. "Men of large affairs, appointed on committees, will work with keenest interest and in greater concentration because of the saving of time in not having to serve on similar committees in the two organizations."

Julius Meier, Who Foresees Greater Efficiency in Conduct of Public Affairs by Proposed Mergers of Commercial Organizations.

"It is assumed that great care will be exercised in the appointment of the committees, and that those appointed will not only be exceptionally fitted for the work, but will devote to the new organization the necessary amount of time and labor to bring more beneficial results to the city, county and state."

"Oregon wants people to cultivate and till the soil; she must build up her farming communities in order to enlarge the commercial interests of the state. It is to be hoped that the new organization will increase to a marked degree the effective work already accomplished by the Oregon Development League through the executive committee of the Commercial Club. Some satisfactory results have been attained; however, more concentrated effort should bring even greater results."

"The greater the number of people engaged in farming, the greater will be the products, which when sent to the four corners of the world will bring in large sums of money for general circulation. The ever increasing demands of the farmers make possible large manufacturing industries and general commercial activity."

"A consolidation such as this makes for greater efficiency, which is demanded in every organization connected along the most modern theories of management. When business institutions can subscribe to one central source and feel that the money is going to be expended wisely and carefully, more will be given. The state in the next two years."
