SLOUGH CUT URGED

North Portland Club Criticizes City Administration.

USE OF FUND CONDEMNED

Assertion Is Made That Proposed Sewer Would Mean Forfeiture of Much Property for Tax and Mass Meeting Called.

The North Portland Commercial Club adopted resolutions at the meeting Tuesday night held in the North Portland Library on Killingsworth avenue and Commercial street, condemning the use that had been made of the $2300 appropriated May 21, 1913, to open up the intake of Columbia Slough...

George S. Shepherd read an itemized report of the disposition of the $2000 which indicated that 90 per cent of the money had been expended for other purposes. Mr. Shepherd declared that the main portion of the $2000 was wasted and that none had been applied directly to the object for which it was appropriated. He said that it would be a simple matter to deepen the intake and divert a current from the Columbia River into Columbia Slough that would carry off sewage from the Peninsula at a cost ranging between $2000 and $3000.

It was asserted that Commissioner Dieck had spent more than $10,000 getting data for a sewer system from the Peninsula and that he favored the construction of a trunk intercepting sewer from Parkrose to the Willamette River, paralleling Columbia Slough, which would cost from $1,000,000 to $1,500,000. It was the sentiment of the meeting that the cost of this trunk sewer would be more than the property owners could stand and would mean confiscation of property. The use of Columbia Slough as the sewer outlet was advocated.

S. L. Osborne declared it would cost less to dredge Columbia Slough than to build the trunk intercepting sewer, the estimated cost being $450,000, according to the estimates of ex-City Engineer Hurlbert, while the sewer trunk would cost more than $1,000,000. E. J. Orth said that a vast amount of material would be needed to fill the approaches to the interstate bridge, and that this could be taken from Columbia Slough.

G. A. Carter, representing the East St. Johns Improvement Association, said that club had taken up the dredging of Columbia Slough with the United States authorities. Mr. Carter said he considered the dredging of Columbia Slough as a project of great importance for the City of Portland, both for a ship channel and for sewerage, and promised that the St. Johns Association would co-operate with the other Peninsula organizations in having the improvement made.

It was decided to call a mass meeting of the property owners of the Peninsula for Saturday, March 20, in the assembly hall of the North Portland Library to discuss the matter.

INCOME TAX CHECKING ON

Many Assumed to Be Delinquent Through Misunderstanding of Law.

The force of deputies in the office of Milton A. Miller, Collector of Internal Revenue, is busily at work tabulating the income tax statements filed with that office prior to March 1 by Oregon people who have incomes of $2000 or more. Until the summary is completed it will not be known just how many have fled or the number of delinquents.

Many failed to file statements. It is understood, through the misunderstanding that because of the exemption of $4000 for married men those with incomes between $2000 and $4000 need not submit statements. This is an error, says Collector Miller, as all with incomes amounting to $2000 or more are required to file their reports and the exemptions will be allowed wherever they are prescribed in the law. The statements are sent to Washington and the amount of the income tax in each case is figured and the statements are then returned here for collection. Although Collector Miller is allowed some discretion in the matter of unavoidable delays, upon a proper showing being made to him by delinquents, the law prescribes a penalty of $1000 for failure to file statements at the time required and a number of Oregon people are liable to have a fine assessed against them.

MOB RESENTS ARREST

CITY DETECTIVE PRICE SELLS ONE THEN DRAWS GUN.

Gus Kropas in Toils for Stabbing Sam Koulas in Fight Over Card Game. Victim May Die.

When friends, numbering two scores, tried to free Gus Kropas, Greek, from the hands of the law after Kropas had stabbed, possibly fatally, a fellow-countryman in a fight at Fourth and Couch streets yesterday, John H. Price, city detective, knocked one man to the ground, and, still holding his prisoner, drew his gun and defied the mob. Two friends of the wounded man joined him and there was no further resistance.

Sam Koulas, the man that was stabbed, was taken to the emergency hospital and later removed to St. Vincent's, where a deep wound in the abdomen was dressed. Kropas was lodged in the city jail on the charge of assault with a deadly weapon by Detectives Price and Miller.

Detective Price was off duty yesterday, being on the night relief, but happened to pass Fourth and Couch streets when the fight was going on. He collared Kropas before the man could flee and found himself in the center of an angry mob of Kropas' friends. Though both men involved were Greeks, each appeared to belong to a different faction and feeling was high. A crowd of several hundred persons gathered when the officer was attacked.

Koulas, the injured man, is an ex-pressman with headquarters at Fourth and Couch streets. He lives in a rooming-house at the corner of Grand avenue and Pine streets. According to his story of the fight, he had been annoyed the night previous by Kropas, when the latter, meeting him when he was engaged in a card game at a Greek coffee-house, insisted upon standing behind him and telling his opponents what cards he held. Hot words were exchanged then, but no blows.

Yesterday Kropas came to Koulas' place of business and the fight started. Several blows had been exchanged when Kropas drew his knife. It had a blade four inches long and made an ugly wound.

Going to the Fair? Take a Kodak An Ideal Companion to organized labor." Thomas McCusker, who has been working on the anti-boycott banner proposition since a large delegation of business men protested against the practice before the Council several months ago, said yesterday that he has the assurance of the members of the City Council that they will submit an anti-boycott banner ordinance to the vote of the people under the initiative.

It is contended by business concerns that the banners hurt the city more than they do the business houses attacked. It is said that persons coming here in search of a place to go into business are frightened away by the display of boycott banners which attract their attention in the business district. It is said this hurts the workers as well as the business interests and the city as a whole.

POPULARITY WANES FAST

Hint of Smallpox in Family of W. A. Glover Shoo Off Associates. William A. ELECTRICAL MEN MEET

Light Association and Engineers' Institute Holds Programme. The National Electric Light Association and American Institute of Electric Engineers held their regular monthly meeting in the Eilers Building Hall Tuesday night. The electricians were accompanied by their wives.

The programme included high-class comedy motion pictures, Miss Bessie Le Count, of the Empress Theater, in pantomime and Goelet, Storts and Lafayette trio, of the Empress, in songs. A paper entitled "Cost Accounting From an Engineer's Standpoint" was read by J. C. Martin, engineer of Pacific Power & Light Company.

In his paper Mr. Martin said that developments in the last few years in the way of efficiency and in answer to the requirements of public service commissions have made it necessary to give a detailed analysis of construction costs.

Rev. A. L. Crim Preaches Sunday. Rev. A. L. Crim, who was recently called to the pastorate of the Central Christian Church, will preach his first sermon in Portland next Sunday. Rev. Crim comes from Tacoma, Wash., where he was prominent in religious work. He formerly resided in Indiana, where he was a leader in the prohibition movement. The pulpit of the Central Church was occupied last by Rev. S. T. Hawkins, who resigned on January 1. Since then Rev. J. R. Johnson and other speakers have preached for the congregation.
