Many were the questions hurled at fascinating Miss Blanche Ring yester-day at the tea party at the Orpheum Theater as to how "she lost 20 pounds." She fairly captivated her audience, and while one perfectly healthy fat matron was being helped to tea Miss Ring said "no sugar." The unhappy woman im-mediately said to the waiting maid, "Hear that? No sugar for me."

"Hear that? No sugar for me."

Every woman present, even the lean and lanky, wanted to know how the interesting actress acquired her wonderfully lissome figure. "Diet, Exercise and Go Without" was the theme of her clever talk. Without sugar, bread and water is what she impressed strongly on the minds of the women who propose to shine in society's foremost ranks in a handsome gown.
