the mountain for the hidden wealth.
It has been several years since anyone has sought the treasure and for a time it looked as though it had been forsection.

For two months this Winter a party of four men has been quietly at work seeking the treasure and several good-sized holes testify to their industry. Put Smith, who has already spent nine years gophering the mountainside in quest of the treasure, has the bee again and has applied for permission from Mr. Reed to dig this Summer. He has the location of the treasure fig-ured down to 190 square feet and de-sires the right to excavate that area. A new mystery was added to the beeswax story connected with the Nehalem Beach by the discovery of a large chunk of the substance under a stump some distance back from the Tayern at Neah-Kah-Nie. While digging out a stump the men removed a
