THE SANDMAN STORY FOR TONIGHT

By Mrs. F. A. Walker.

Gretchen Von Doll—Part II. CAROLINE thought it was time she interfered, but when she tried to step she found to her surprise she could not move, and then she heard Marie's voice and forgot to wonder why she could not get to the doll house.

In the kitchen was Maggie, a doll cook, and it was to her that Marie was speaking. "Maggie, I want you to go upstairs and tell that nurse maid she is not allowed to go in the living-room. She sits by the window looking out and neglecting her duties. Tell her to take the baby out in the carriage," Caroline heard her say. Then she heard Maggie going upstairs, and pretty soon she saw in the door where Caroline could see her.

"The missus says for you to take the baby out in the carriage and don't ye know we servants don't sit in this room," said Maggie.

Still Gretchen did not reply, but this time she did turn around and look at Maggie and the look she gave her sent Maggie out of the room without another word.

Maggie had gone to her room when Gretchen reached the kitchen and Caroline could see her dressing the little wax doll she called the baby.

"You look like a maid, and I thought you were the nurse for baby," she said when she saw Gretchen still sitting by the window.

Gretchen turned around and looked at her as she had at Maggie some time, but it did not send Marie out of the room, at it did Maggie.

"I suppose you are ignorant," said Marie, in a haughty manner. "As you are a foreigner, you are not allowed to sit in the living rooms of the family."

her, but I am a guest and not a maid, and if I am to be treated as such I will get right back into the trunk and go back to Germany."

"Oh, what will I do?" she thought. "Gretchen Von Doll must not go back. Aunt Patsy will think I did not care for her. I must reach her and take her out of the doll house."

"I must take Gretchen out of the doll house, because if she goes back Aunt Patsy will think I did not like her present, and I do love Gretchen very much."

"Very well, I will bring Gretchen and put her in bed with you," said her mother. Caroline hugged Gretchen tight in her arms and snuggled her close. "You won't go back to Germany, will you?" she asked.

Gretchen did not reply, but as Caroline found her there beside her in the morning she felt sure Gretchen liked the treatment she received and would stay in America.

PEACE SUNDAY APRIL 18

All Churches in San Francisco are to Join in Services.

All churches in San Francisco will hold Thanksgiving services on Sunday, April 18, commemorating peace in the United States, and Portland clergymen have been asked to observe the occasion. The date chosen is the ninth anniversary of the San Francisco fire.

The resolution urges the co-operation of clergymen in every city of the United States to make these services of thanks country-wide. Garner Curran, Deputy World's Insurance Commissioner, has requested Louis Somers, chairman of the Northwest delegation to the congress, to distribute copies of the resolution among the clergy of Portland so that they may make suitable arrangements for sermons on the subject.

Most talking is done by people who have nothing to say.
