MISSIONARY CONVENTION OPENS.

The convention of the Women's Home Missionary Society, Salem district, will open in the Graham Methodist Church today and will hold sessions till tomorrow afternoon. Mrs. A. A. Underhill, of Salem, president, will preside. Mrs. C. W. Stapleton, Mrs. J. N. Clahan and Mrs. George W. Kenney are the reception committee. Mrs. Underhill will deliver the opening address this afternoon, followed by reports. On Friday morning a session of officers will be held. In the afternoon Mrs. J. L. Gerten will give a report on the industrial home, and Mrs. Fannie Gertz will tell about the old people's home. Mrs. H. P. Bodkin will deliver an address on "Our Duties to the National Society." Rev. Melville P. Wire, pastor, and committee have arranged for entertainment of delegates.

HOLIDAY PUPILS TO ENTERTAIN.

A "Mother Goose" entertainment, "The House That Jack Built," will be given at the Holiday School, Friday and Saturday nights, under the direction of Professor Robert Krohn and about 60 children in costume. Miss Helen Moore, housewife, will be "Mother Goose." The Parent-Teacher Association, its president, Mrs. Lawrence Holbrook, Mr. Krohn and his assistants, Miss Rogers and Miss Monroe have worked to make the affair the success it promises to be. The proceeds will be used to purchase a rotary mimeograph for the use of the school.

HOUSES NEEDED FOR THREE CHILDREN.

Who has a home for two little girls and a bright little boy? Three homeless children are being cared for at the Pisgah Home. One of the girls is 12 and the other is 13. The former would like to find a home with a farmer's family. It is said that she is an excellent housekeeper. The other girl prefers to stay in the city. The boy also wants to find a home in the country. All the children must be taken with the understanding that they will be allowed to go to school.

SALINA MAN, THUNDER WAGONER.

J. C. Douville, who was arrested in Salem Tuesday night accused of passing bad checks to the amount of $111 there, is believed by the Portland police to be Charles P. Barkhill, who is wanted in this city on a charge of swindling local merchants. City Detective Mallett may bring the man to Portland today to see if the local crimes might be laid to him, but it is probable that he will be prosecuted on the Salem charges first.

FIRE BUREAU ALARM LINESMAN LOSTS PLACE.

Because of having been implicated with a number of men and women in a picnic which ended in a debacle, J. A. Ambrose, a lineman in the fire bureau alarm service, was suspended from the service yesterday by Fire Chief Powell. The action was approved by Mayor Albee. Dismissal is to follow the suspension. The charge against Mr. Ambrose is "conduct prejudicial to good order."

FORMER BAKER PLAYER IS STAR AT PANTAGES THIS WEEK.

Roland Bradbury.

Roland Bradbury, for seven seasons one of the favorite Baker Players, is in Portland again this week as the star in "Outwitted," the striking dramatic play from his own pen. He is featured at Pantages Theater.

Theater-goers of Portland will best remember Mr. Bradbury as the delineator of the heavy roles and the character parts at the stock house for seven seasons. He was with the Baker Players when they were at the old Third-street theater. Lillian Lawrence and John Selinger were playing lead roles. He moved to the Bungalow with Izzetta Jewell and Sydney Ayres and later he again moved to the Eleventh-street playhouse with Alice Fleming.

Wife Wields Frying Pan on Hubby Who Aided Her.

Harvey Nicklin First Appears at Jail and Begs Off for Spouse and Then Has Another Tale of Woe.

HARVEY NICKLIN pleaded with Deputy District Attorney Mowry Tuesday afternoon and secured the release from the County Jail of his wife, Beulah Nicklin, who had fled from her home with another man, leaving her three little children behind her.

Nicklin appeared again yesterday morning with his three babies, and said his wife had struck him over the head with a frying pan and had run away once more.

Mrs. Nicklin was arrested Saturday night by Deputy Constable McCullough in company with Andy Leitbauer. They were charged with a statutory offense and lodged in the County Jail. Nicklin, with the three children, the oldest of whom is 5 years of age, came from his home at Cedar Mills and talked to his wife in the jail.

"She'll come back home and be good now, I think," he told Deputy District Attorney Mowry. "I wish you would let both of them go."

Mr. Mowry dismissed the charges against the pair. The husband and wife, each carrying a "child and leading mother, went away apparently happy.

Nicklin was again at the Courthouse yesterday morning. He stayed downtown last night," he said, "and pretty soon she started to quarrel with me. All of a sudden she picked up a frying pan and hit me on the head with it. She ran out the back way. I went after her pretty soon, but she had gone, and I haven't seen her since. I don't like to see you send her to jail, but I'd like to get her to come back home and take care of the kids."
