Ainsworth dock, used by the "Big Three" fleet, and plans showing the work in detail have been filed with the Commission of Public Docks to be acted on Thursday. There has been talk for the old Alaskin dock being built and of the site of the old Alaskin dock being included, but the determination of the Commission is taken to mean that there is no prospect of a new dock for the present.

One reason for such an expenditure not being shouldered is thought to be the fact the O.-W. R. & N. It is understood there are a number of minor matters that will be taken up with Mr. O'Connor in connection with a step recently taken along the Const to bring about uniform conditions and wages. It is assumed here that the head of the association cannot be informed minutely on certain features and it said that at a meeting to be held today the entire situation will be gone over. Union officers say they do not regard the formation recently of Employers' Waterfront Unions on the Coast as a move to the detriment of their organizations, but rather an advantage because in the future differences can be threshed out between committees representing both sides, but being experienced in maritime matters and customs.

On the approach vacant ground has been turned into lawns, while new and wider gangulanks, life rings located on the front of the dock and additional facilities have been provided for the safety and comfort or passengers.

The wierdness, the wilderness and the fascination of Ancient Egypt is portrayed vividly. Bothwell Browne and her company of 11 appear in the playlet. Miss Browne takes the part of Cleoparta, who near the end of her life, upon hearing of the death of Marc Anthony, kills herself by a serpent's sting. The serpent is a vicious looking reptile, almost five feet long. The production is one of the most colorful that has been seen here for a long time. Brilliant hues and jewels harmonize in the scanty costumes of the 10 dancing girls. Cleopatra herself almost dazzles the eyes with her display of jewels. The music is wild and low.
