Frank Glance Charms Money Away When Cashiers Find Lass Needs Cash at Once-Warning From Detectives Is Too Late.

A slim girl of 22 years, with blonde hair and blue eyes, described by William J. Burns' International Detective Agency as a "dangerous woman forghas just paid Portland her Spring visit and has left the city with sav-eral hundred dollars, gleaned from leading merchants and banks, by the old, old means of bogus checks.

The detectives say in a circular letter, that unfortunately reached the city a day after the ciever young penwoman had left town, that her name is Ada Tawber, but she made no use of that monaker while in Portland. She used plain Jane Smith in coaxing money from local strong boxes. Other names she has employed in victimizing about 25 banks throughout the country are: Marie Smith, Margaret St. John, Carrie from local strong boxes, Other names she has employed in victimizing about 25 banks throughout the country are:

It was a warning that came too late. Those who received the letter could testify to the accuracy of the detective bureau's deductions, but they had already chalked up new entries in the profit and loss account.

She is described by the detective circular as an attractive young woman

The young woman presented letters from Chicago as she told the trustful money handlers with a frank glance from her vow blue eyes that it would be a great accommodation if they would cash the check. When they did so she thanked them very prettily and tripped out.

Knowledge that the last of the sea raiders was out of the way for the present seemed to have considerable effect on sentiment favoring higher prices for wheat, the bless being that shipments would be safet and the insurance less. This theory was in a measure confirmed by a rush of Eastern orders to purchase here, especially the July delivery, in which fully nine-tenths of the business was centered.

It was the first session of the exchange in its new quarters and there was a large attendance, but the occasion did not inspire of the control of the control

Corn advanced at first with wheat, country offerings grew larger, and there were reports that an important industry had stopped buying at St. Louis. On the other hand, Chicago stocks and visible supply gave evidence that a heavy movement was in progress.

Holders of eats unloaded rather freely after corn turned weak. Previously sellers were scarce, despite favorable weather for seeding.

Higher prices for hogs falled to sustain things and shipping bluestem were raised 1 cent, and red Russian bids were 1 to 2 cents higher. Club and fife offers were unchanged from Saturant and self-seeding.

Trading was active enough at all times to indicate that speculative interests still were in control, but the course of paless suggested not only further selling for profits for home and foreign interests, but a renewal of bearish aggressions as well. Unsettle.nest was most pronounced in the final hour, when Bethiahem Steel once more became the center of a foverish buying movement, which sent the price up to 126, or 8 points above its previous record figure. The stock closed at 124, a net gain for the day of 16 points.
