Attitude Toward Press Changes. Frederich W. Lehman, ex-Solicitor-General of the United States, addressed the members of the Associated Press yesterday on the development of the press of the United States and the press of the United States and the changing attitude of public opinion toward newspapers. He said, in part:

"The original attitude of the law toward the press was one of repression. It was a Governor of Virginia who thanked God that they had no printing press in the colony and would not have for a hundred years. It was the General Court of Massachusetts which suppressed, on its first appearance, the first newspaper attempted to be published in what is now the United States.

"The 18th century brought with it an increasing sense of individual worth and dignity which insisted upon worth and dignity which insisted upon finding expression for its thought. Of course that freedom was accompanied with responsibility for its due exercise. We have laws which punish the publication of matter offensive to public decency: we require that that which is paid for shall appear as pald material, and in these days when John Company has taken the place of John Smith and we don't know who John Company signifies we must have some manifes the graph of the company of the company signifies we must have some manifes the graph of the company signifies we must have some manifes the graph of the company signifies we must have some manifes the graph of the company signifies we must have some manifes the company of the company signifies we must have some manifes the company of the tation of that also,

Record for mpartiality a Clear. There are two possible systems of news-gathering; one to deal with it as a purely commercial enterprise for profit, and the other by a co-operative institution like the Associated Press, in which any element of immediate profit to the association itself is left out of the account.

"In a co-operative institution like the Associated Press you have not only the better restraints of men, but even the baser forces work in counterpoise against each other. With a member-ship like yours, distributed through all the states of the Union, representing every shade of religious and political belief and every variety of commercial every shade of religious and political belief and every variety of commercial and industrial interest, there is but one tenure of office to those who manage its affairs, and that is good conduct approved by substantially all of the members of the association.

Hunters and trappers will be employed to wage war on the coyotes in the United States than in all the rest of the world beside.

"It is said that the members monopolize their news for their own columns and do not open them to those who are not members. What is news? Roughly speaking, news is the first report of an event of public and current interest. News signifies nothing in the world except personal service. To receive everybody who publishes a paper to membership would be to destroy the association itself, because, while there is much that may go into a newspaper that may be mere routine, as market reports, still every man wishes to make his paper a dis-tinctive publication, and if there is nothing distinctive in its general news report, a newspaper will become in-different and undertake to gain a dis-tinctive quality of something altogether aside from the budget of news fur-nished by the Associated Press,
