NOTHING is being left undone to make the big vaudeville to be given today and tonight at the Eleventh-street playhouse the most unique and interesting affair of the season in an amateur way. The programme is replete with songs, dances, stunts and sketches. Flowers and homemade candy will be on sale and the hand-painted posters which have been on display in downtown windows will be auctioned off between acts at the evening performance.
The entire proceeds will go toward entertaining the visiting clubwomen who will come to this city in June to attend the National federation council meeting.
Following is the complete programme for the afternoon and evening performances:

An elaborate programme has been arranged and the affair is being conducted by prominent clubwomen. The proceeds will be used for entertaining the General Federation Council which meets here in June.
For the benefit of Madeleine Parisi, Mr. and Mrs. Frank J. Sinnott will be joint hosts with Mr. and Mrs. William P. Sinnott at the home of the former at Irvington, Twenty-fifth and Thompson streets. Card tables will be arranged for 500 and a large reception will precede the card game. A buffet supper will be served throughout the evening and an elaborate musical programme will be a feature of the affair. Mrs. T. J. Murphy and Mrs. Dan J. ## THE SANDMAN STORY FOR TONIGHT

By Mrs. F. A. Walker

The Wild Boobloo.
MR FOX had a fine farm, and one summer he said to his wife: "My dear, let us plant our corn and peas early; then we can go to the seashore and enjoy ourselves while they are growing."

So they planted the crop early, and the corn and peas grew up to the seashore and had a fine time. And when it was time to put the crop away for the winter they returned home, but they found that the corn and peas were all gone, and the fields were all bare. "It was that bad Wolf that stole your crop; I didn't do it," said the Bear. "It was that thieving Bear that robbed you; I didn't do it," said the Coon.
"It was old man Coon that took your corn and peas; I didn't do it," said the Possum, and so they all spoke to each other, each accusing the others.
"I'll go see for myself," said Mr. Fox to his wife, and he went down to the fields.
"Here's Mr. Bear's track," said Mr. Fox, pointing out a big footprint.
"And here's old man Coon's track," said Mrs. Fox.
"And here's Billy Possum's tracks," said the little foxes.
"They've all been robbing me," said Mr. Fox. "And they told me stories about it, too, and I'm going to make them give me back what they stole, and more, too, and I'm not going to ask them for it nor pay them a penny, nor to let them steal any more of my corn and peas."
Then he wrote a letter about it all to his cousin, whose name was— but never mind about that now—and he sent it to the man who he saw the other animals hauling their ripe corn and peas to their barns. Then he ruffled up his hair and mused himself about it, too, and he thought, "If I could only get all the animals' heads and put them in Mr. Fox's barn."
"The Wild Boobloo is a coming to-morrow!" it eats all the corn and peas when it's hungry, and when it is hungry again it eats some more, and the hunger it gets the more it eats! The Wild Boobloo comes to-morrow!"
Of course this scared all the animals frightfully, for they thought this Boobloo must be a very terrible creature, so they all hid their crops over Mr. Fox's head and called Mr. Fox stuck his head out of the upstairs window.
"Oh, Mr. Fox, they're crying 'till us how we can keep the wild Boobloo from eating up all our corn and peas."
"I will keep the Wild Boobloo from eating your crops," replied Mr. Fox, "if you will give me half of them."
The animals begged him to take less, but Mr. Fox would not let them.
"Well," they said at last, "it's better to save half than have the wild Boobloo eat it all." So that afternoon they all handed half their crops over and put them in Mr. Fox's barn.
The next day most of the animals were afraid to stir for fear of the wild Boobloo; but in the evening, the crop came and all went over to Mr. Fox's to get the news. Mr. Fox was sitting on his front porch, talking to a handsome young girl, talking to "Good evening," said Mr. Fox, bowing politely. "Let me introduce my cousin, the Wild Boobloo. I wrote him to come over and pay me a visit to-day."
Of course the animals were furious.

But they could do nothing, for Mr. Fox had told them nothing but the truth, and it was their own foolish fear that caused them to be so frightened over the wild Boobloo. So they went home growing and snoring, and blaming the others for stealing Mr. Fox's crop.

NOTED ORGANIST HERE

J. J. McCLELLAN, OF SALT LAKE, ENDS RECITALS AT FAIR.
Installation of Instrument in Portland Auditorium Is Urged—Ovna City Held Example.
Professor John J. McClellan, who presides, over the master-organ of the Mormon Tabernacle at Salt Lake City, was the guest of Dr. F. E. Moore yesterday. Mr. McClellan arrived from San Francisco early yesterday, where he had given a series of organ recitals during the week in Festival Hall at the exposition. Mr. McClellan is an old friend of Dr. and Mrs. Moore, and was the accompanist for the coloratura soprano, Miss Felice Lynn, in her concerts given in the Mormon Tabernacle at Salt Lake City and in the La Grande Tabernacle.
Mr. McClellan has been chief organist of the tabernacle since 1909, and has played nearly 4000 public and special organ recitals on the world-famous tabernacle organ.
Professor McClellan is much interested in the idea of installing a grand organ in the Portland Civic Auditorium, and expressed the hope that great care would be used by those in charge of this big enterprise in the securing of a worthy instrument and a competent organist.
Salt Lake has proved that many tourists stop over for days to hear the organ recitals of the tabernacle, and the musical appreciation of the residents of Salt Lake City has grown remarkably during the past 15 years," said Mr. McClellan. "When I began playing organ weekly 15 years ago, it was difficult to maintain order during the performance of a Bach, Rheinberger or Gullmair number, but now these masters are heard reverently, and for our request recitals on Saturday of each week we have as many requests for good, classical music as we have for the more popular compositions."

MEAT NUTRIOUS TO THE KIDNEYS

Take a Tablespoonful of Salts If Back Hurts or Bladder Bothers.
We are a Nation of meat eaters and our blood is filled with uric acid, says a well-known authority, who warns us to be constantly on guard against kidney trouble.
The kidneys do their utmost to free the blood of this irritating acid, but become weak from the overwork; they are sluggish, sleeplessness, acid stomach and thus the waste is retained in the blood to poison the entire system.
When your kidneys ache and feel like lumps of lead, and you have stinging pains in the back or the urine is cloudy, full of sediment, or the bladder is irritable, obliging you to seek relief during the night; when you have severe headaches, nervous and dizzy spells, sleeplessness, acid stomach or rheumatism in bad weather, get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast each morning and in a few days your kidneys will act fine. This famous salt is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate clogged kidneys, to neutralize the acids in the urine so it is no longer a source of irritation, thus ending urinary and bladder discomforts.
Jad Salts is inexpensive and cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink, and nobody can resist its uric acid flushing action. Occasionally to keep the kidneys clean and active—Adv.
