WHAT WILL RELIEVE STOMACH TROUBLE

A Hard Question—But This Retired Ohio Farmer Answers It—Mr. Matteson's Statements are Reliable. Upper Sandusky, Ohio.—"I suffered from nervous dyspepsia and stomach trouble so that large lumps would seem to come up in my throat, and would get so dizzy I could not stand up or even see. I tried different remedies but nothing seemed to help me until one day my druggist told me about Vinol. I tried it and soon noticed an improvement and now I am well."

MARSHFIELD, Or., April 29.—(Special.)—The grand jury at Coquille, after a two days' session, today postponed until the second day of the circuit court the investigation of the charges against Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Russell of having poisoned Arthur Russell. The couple were arrested recently. Thomas Edgar and J. Kennedy, of Empire, were fined $50 each and sentenced to serve 30 days in jail for selling liquor to Indians. Hite Brewster was sentenced to serve from 3 to 10 years in the penitentiary for assaulting and robbing Gunder Severson, in Marshfield. Roy James, a negro, was sentenced to serve from one to five years in prison for assaulting a Coquille man with a razor.

to Vancouver and purchased a gun, which she intended to use if forced to do so. Mrs. Tackels returned to the courtroom just as her ex-husband was taking the stand, and she sat down in the end of the rear seat. He had just completed testifying that his ex-wife had been responsible for his having lost a number of jobs when Mrs. Tackels rose to her feet and walked toward him. She drew the small 22-caliber revolver and fired when the barrel was within a couple of feet from Tackels' head. Court Bailiff Johnson was but an instant too quick for her, and deflected her deadly intention by striking her hand and causing the gun to deflect so that the bullet pierced the wall not far from Judge Stephenson's head. Before the gun could be wrested from her hand she fired a second shot, but in the struggle the gun was pointed so that it struck Mrs. McElroy.

Spectators Make Hurried Exit. In a twinkling the courtroom was cleared of spectators and attorneys, all fleeing to escape the flying bullets with the exception of the judge and bailiff and Mrs. McElroy.

Had Mrs. Tackels' intentions, been realized she could easily have been forestalled had a shot had been fired, for she walked several feet before she attempted to use the weapon. However, she did it so naturally that no one in the courtroom realized there was any danger until they saw the outstretched weapon and the flash of the shot. The mother of the girl had just entered the courtroom preceding the shots, and took the seat which her daughter vacated as she later started on her mission of revenge.

Mrs. McElroy, who is employed in the District Attorney's office and was taking testimony at the time, wished to return to her work at the office in spite of the wound which she had received, but was sent home in an automobile. She is a senior at the University of Oregon law school.

The sanity of Mrs. Tackels was questioned when she was arrested previously, but no examination of her mental condition was ordered. On the evening of March 11, when she was released from a previous charge of shoplifting after having attempted suicide, Dr. William House made an official examination to see if she was sane.

suffering from melancholia that would possibly lead to another attempt at self-destruction.

Relatives Are Warned.

"I warned her mother at that time," said Dr. House last night, "to watch the girl closely, for, as she had tried to commit suicide once, there was danger that she might make another attempt. I did not make a close enough examination to determine her sanity, however."

Since her first appearance at police headquarters on March 5, when she was asked to be placed in jail for 30 days that she might escape domestic troubles, Mrs. Tackels has been one of the most spectacular characters the local police have had to deal with. No formal charge of insanity was ever lodged against her, though she was suspected of being mentally deranged from the time she first desired to break into jail.

Suicide Desire Announced.

Mrs. Tackels prefaced her remark that she wanted to be locked up, on the night of March 5, by asking Police Captain Circle to lend her his gun that she might kill herself. She said she had once before attempted suicide by swallowing carbolic acid, but had recovered. Apparently cured of her desire for jail, Mrs. Tackels was released March 7, without having appeared in court on any charge.

On March 9 Mrs. Tackels made another entry into the city jail, this time on the charge of shoplifting. She attempted to swallow poison, but was prevented by store detectives. The goods were returned and Mrs. Tackels was released by Judge Stephenson under a continued sentence. Since that time, according to the records in the women's department, Mrs. Tackels was arrested for being intoxicated, but was not held on the charge.

Shoplifting Charge Filled.

A week ago Mrs. Tackels was again seen in Municipal Court, when she appeared as a witness against her husband, Harvey Tackels, on a charge of vagrancy preferred against Tackels and Sue Starling by Police Lieutenant Harna. The case was continued until yesterday for hearing.

In the meantime "Dolly," as Mrs. Tackels was more generally known to the police, was in trouble again. Monday afternoon at 2 o'clock she was arrested by City Detective Hyde and Vaughn on a complaint signed by W. R. Griffin, charging her with the larceny of a dress from the department store of Olds, Wortman & King. Familiarity had bred contempt of restraining bars by this time, and Mrs. Tackels made a clever daylight escape from jail.

While Mrs. J. C. Sampson, the matron, was elsewhere Mrs. Tackels sauntered from the woman's section of the jail on the fifth floor of the Municipal building and demanded that the elevator man take her to the Bureau of Public Safety for Women on the third floor. Instead of entering this department when she stepped from the elevator, Mrs. Tackels walked down two more flights of stairs and to the street, past officers and desk sergeant unquestioned.

Appearance Is Surprised.

Since that time her whereabouts were a mystery, and no trace of her had been found until she walked into court yesterday of her own accord, with the desire to testify as to her husband's relations with the woman she hated.

Mrs. Tackels is 28 years old, pretty, and dresses well. She has been divorced from her husband for two years, but, if it had not been for the "other woman" was to have been remarried this week, it was declared yesterday. "I am not jealous of the other woman. I wanted to win my husband back to a better life," said Mrs. Tackels in the City Jail last night. Tears still showed on her face. Her hair was disordered, and every feature told of the mental crisis she had just endured. "I had the revolver inside my waist," Mrs. Tackels continued. "I thought if Mr. Tackels came into court to make me out a liar—well, I didn't know what I would do. I was just driven to where I couldn't stand it any longer."

Scorn Assigned as Reason.

"The thought that Harry had won my confidence and caused me to be separated from my child just to scorn me later, had made me desperate. It seemed that he had done it for revenge because I wouldn't go back to him when he first asked me."

"But it's no use, if he hasn't any more manhood than that, I am foolish to love him."

Mr. and Mrs. Tackels were married nine years ago. Two years ago they were divorced, but were separated only a month, according to Mrs. Tackels.

Last September Mrs. Tackels again left the man and went back to her parents, Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Conklin, of Milwaukee. Mr. and Mrs. Tackels have one child, Millie, 6 years old.

"I was so happy with my parents again," Mrs. Tackels said. "Then my former husband came back and wanted me. Father and mother said he would bring me trouble. I told him to stay away, but he wouldn't.

"Then my parents started legal proceedings to get the custody of the child. Harry said that if I would stay by him we would fight the case until we won. I would have shot him in the head, I think, if the officer had not seized me."

Mrs. Tackels said that she and her husband had gone to high school and normal school together before their marriage at Mankato, Minn.
