

WAR TO ANNIHILATE ARMENIANS FEARED

Hope for American and Italian Diplomatic Intervention Is Still Entertained.

Only Three Escape From One Village of 300 Inhabitants Attacked by Kurds and Turks—Russia Is Pushing Victory.

TIFLIS, Trans-Caucasia, via Petrograd, May 5.—The pursuit of the defeated Turkish army under the command of Khalil Bey in the Khori-Dilman region of the Caucasus is being continued, according to trustworthy advice reaching Tiflis.

This battle, which resulted in heavy losses for the Turks, began April 29 at Hantahia, near Urumiah. Turkish reinforcements compelled the Russians to abandon Dilman and entrench themselves at Magoshio, from which position they kept up a heavy artillery fire until the arrival of Russian reinforcements.

Many Refugees on Way. Three hundred refugees from Dilman have arrived at Julfa, just over the border in Russia, and 1200 more are on their way. The Russian Consul here is taking measures to prevent refugees from Urumiah and Dilman from entering the Caucasus.

Nersis, the bishop of Tabriz, Persia, has arrived here in a desperate situation at Van as a desperate. Eight hundred Turks and a large number of Kurds are active there, destroying Armenian villages. Of 300 inhabitants of the village of Rashava, only three escaped. The Armenians, according to the bishop, are still hoping for American and Italian diplomatic interference. At Van they now have been standing off the Turks and Kurds for a week. Four Turkish regiments are advancing against these Armenians from Erzinga.

Terror Prevents Crop Planting. It is feared that the history of 1895 and 1896 will be repeated.

It is declared in Armenia that the Young Turks have adopted the policy pursued by Abdul Hamid in that year, namely, the annihilation of the Armenians.

The existing state of terror has prevented the planting of crops, and famine is impending. The city of Erzurum, in Turkish Armenia, has today 200 cases of typhus fever.

JITNEYS LOSE TEST CASE

Burdensome Regulations Are Upheld in Washington Court.

SEATTLE, May 5.—The test case, brought in the Superior Court to obtain a decision on the constitutionality of the new state law imposing burdensome regulations on 5-cent motor buses, was decided today against the bus owners. Notice of appeal was given.

Today's decision removes the protection given by the Prosecuting Attorney to the 500 motor bus drivers of Seattle, few of whom have taken out the $1000 bond required, at a cost of $100 a year. Agents of the Puget Sound Traction, Light & Power Company have obtained the names of all the unbonded motor bus drivers, and it is expected that all will be arrested at the instance of the company.

First Convention of Newly Enfranchised Voters to Be Held in San Francisco to Devise Means for Furthering Move.

NEW YORK, May 5.—(Special).—Mrs. M. H. De Young, of San Francisco, recently conferred with Mrs. O. H. P. Belmont, of this city, on plans that have for their purpose support in Congress for the Susan B. Anthony amendment to the United States Constitution. The two suffrage leaders met in front of Congressional Union headquarters. Mrs. Belmont said of the meeting: "This marks the union of the East and the West." Many women of the Western states, where woman suffrage has been granted, are rallying to the aid of the women of the East in their campaign for voting rights.

To devise means of having women voters of the West determine definite action to secure the adoption of the Susan B. Anthony amendment, a convention will be held in San Francisco September 14 to 16. Mrs. Belmont is National chairman of the committee in charge of the convention, which will be held under the auspices of the Congressional Union for Woman Suffrage. She will have the active co-operation of many influential women of the West in the organization of the convention of women voters, which will be the first meeting of its kind ever held in the United States.

ATTACK LESS SUCCESSFUL

(Continued From First Page.) tween us and the enemy was the poison belt, the upper part shredding into thin wreaths of vapor as it was shaken by the wind, and the lower and denser part sinking into all inequalities of the ground and rolling slowly down the trenches. Shells would land in for a moment, but it only settled down again as thickly as before.

German Face Double Danger. "Nevertheless, the German infantry face and they faced a half of shrapnel as well. In some cases where the gas had not reached our lines our troops held firm and shot through the clouds of the advancing Germans. In other cases the men holding the front line managed to move to the flank, where they were more or less beyond the attacked area. Here they waited until the enemy came on, and then bayoneted them when they reached our trenches.

"On the extreme left our supports waited until the wall of vapor reached our trenches, when they charged through it and met the advancing Germans with the bayonet as they swarmed over the parapets. "South of St. Julien the denseness of the vapor compelled us to evacuate trenches, but reinforcements arrived, who charged the enemy before they could establish themselves. In every case the assaults failed completely. Large numbers were mowed down by our artillery. Men were seen falling in heaps, and others scattering and running back to their own lines.

Gas Cloud Claims Many. "Many who reached the gas cloud could not make their way through it, and in all probability a great number of the wounded perished from the fumes. "Further to the east a similar attack was made about 7 P. M., which seems to have been attended with even less success, and the assaulting infantry was at once beaten back by our artillery fire.

It was not long before all our trenches were reoccupied and the whole line re-established in its original position. The attack on the French met with same result. "A great deal has been said of the troops on the left which saved the situation on April 22-23, but the services rendered by the British infantry further east were no less remarkable. The area to the north and east of Zonnebeke, representing a narrow horn of the salient, formed a kind of bastion. Throughout the fighting this garrison held firm under a raking artillery fire from all sides and under repeated as-

RUSSIANS RETREAT FROM CARPATHIANS

Austro-German Advance From West Galicia Menaces Army in Mountains.

SHELL FIRE IS APPALLING

Prisoners Say Czar's Army Never Experienced Such Terrific Assault—Petrograd Says Foo's Losses Are Enormous.

LONDON, May 5.—Full retreat by the Russian army from the Beskid chain of the Carpathians in Hungary has begun as a result of the Austro-German victory in West Galicia, according to an official dispatch from Vienna, which adds that the Austro-Germans are in pursuit. The victorious Austro-Germans are continuing their advance from the west, adds the communication, and military observers think it probable that the line of retreat of the Russians who had advanced into the Carpathians is threatened.

The front over which the Austro-German forces gained their victory is given by the Vienna war office as 92 miles. Russian Generals Killed. A correspondent of the Berlin Tageblatt, writing of the Russian reverse, said: "All the staff officers of one Russian battlefield were killed or wounded, including several Generals. The majority of prisoners wore military caps, but civilian clothing. They complained of insufficient food."

A dispatch from Berlin says: "Special dispatches from the West Galician battlefields say that Russian prisoners describe the effect of the German and Austrian artillery fire as appalling. The havoc thus wrought was particularly severe at Gorlice, where the Russians fought stubbornly and for four hours endured a terrific fire. In this time, according to these reports, divisions dwindled to regiments and regiments to companies.

The Russian center was so shaken by the reverse sustained by the two Galician battlefields that it was compelled to abandon its positions. Thousands of prisoners were made in the center, as well as on the wings. Carpathians Army Exposed. "The victory of the Austro-German forces is considered of special importance because it deprives the Russian army of the Carpathians of protection against a flanking movement. "The correspondent of the Zeitung Am Mittag telegraphs that the situation of the Russians is growing worse hourly, as line after line of German and Austrian troops push forward, despite opposition. He says that the Russians are endeavoring vainly to bring up reinforcements and halt the panicky retreat of their columns.

"The heavy artillery has made the huge battlefield a horrible sight, tearing up the ground, demolishing positions of the Russians and scattering their supplies. "The list of Russian dead, according to this correspondent, is extraordinarily large, while the losses of the Germans are said to have been insignificant. Long lines of prisoners are being put on board trains which are leaving constantly for the interior, as are also the German wounded. Russian prisoners are credited with the unanimous statement that the battle was more terrible than anything they had experienced previously."

German Losses Heavy. "In the region of Rosenny (Kovno) province we are successfully advancing. On the other fronts as far as the upper Vistula there is no change. "In Galicia the fighting between the Vistula and the Carpathians is developing with unvarying stubbornness. The Germans have brought up to the fighting line fresh forces of a great strength, supported by numerous artillery. The enemy, following his old tactics of attacking in massed formation, is suffering enormous losses. "Some of our units fell back to the second line of fortifications after desperate fighting. During the night of May 2-3 in the direction of Strzy the enemy recaptured part of the trenches on Mount Makukia. The following night we counter-attacked and dislodged the enemy. We captured here more than 1200 prisoners, including 30 officers.

"In the region of Angelow, on the upper Lomnitz, the enemy on May 3 assumed the offensive on a somewhat extensive front, but the movement was barren of results."
