WOMAN'S TIP' CLEW

Arrest of Alleged Robbers Laid to Desire to Talk.

MORE "JOBS" ARE TRACED

Postoffice Inspectors Believe They Have Found Authors of Hold-ups Hitherto Unaccounted For.

All Are to Be Tried Here.

A woman's inability to keep a secret put postoffice inspectors on the track which led to the arrest of Bruce Granville, and enabled them to accumulate a mass of evidence against Granville and Carl P. Mack, who are under arrest for the robbery of Postoffice station A in Portland last February.

The inspectors who were looking for the second man of the gang who was supposed to have aided Mack in the station A holdup, and to have helped him dispose of stolen money orders. They quietly took this tip and had it up Granville. His arrest last Friday and implication not only in the Portland robbery, but in numerous other "jobs" with Mack, followed.

The inspectors now believe that Mack and Granville were the daylight robbers who "stuck up" S. W. King in his office in the Washington building last March. Mr. King yesterday identified Granville's revolver as a gun of the type used by the men.

Another job they pulled, in addition to the five or six already laid to them, the inspectors say, was the robbery of the Citizens' Saving & Loan Society, of Spokane, after backing Robert E. Porterfield, the secretary, into a clothes closet. They got $38 from him. This was the night of March 12, one day after Mr. King was held up here. Two hundred dollars was taken from him.

Some time after the station A holdup, the evidence shows, Mack and Granville went to Long Beach, Cal. A hold-up there at about that time is also laid to them.

Inspector Steve Morse, of Portland, who has taken an active part in running down the case, has prepared the necessary papers to bring Granville to Portland for trial, and Mack and Miss Donville are to be brought here also. At Seattle yesterday Granville was held to the grand jury under $25,000 bail.

ORPHEUM MOVIE HOUSE

OPENING SET FOR SUNDAY WITH "THE ETERNAL CITY"

Report Current That Mr. Considine May Take Back Empress Because of Payment Default.

The Orpheum will open in Portland Sunday as a moving picture theater. This announcement was made yesterday by Manager Conlon, who was just in receipt of a telegram from General Manager Considine announcing that the latter had reached New York and had procured the Portland and Seattle rights for "The Eternal City," a film drama that is considered superior even to "Cabrilla" or "Quo Vadis." It will be sent to the local theater for its premier in the movie world.

Manager Considine is in New York in connection with his sale of the Empress chain of theaters to the Marcus Loew interests, the latter having been reported to have failed to make a payment as required by the terms of the sale. It is considered probable that the future of the local Orpheum may somewhat depend on what plans Mr. Considine may develop for handling the Em-
