He swore he had never met or seen Mr.

Many of the questions he answered on direct examination were designed, his counsel said, to indicate the "dominance of the defendant in the Repub-lican party."

Colonel Matches Witness.

Mr. Barnes emphatically denied that he had ever tried to influence the votes of legislators. He did say he was subjected to constant solicitation on the Senatorial question, however.

During his four hours on the witness stand he maintained his customary even tone of voice, but once he showed impatience, when John M. Bowers, chief counsel for Colonel Roosevelt, closely questioned him about the times he saw and talked with the defendant when the Colonel was Governor. when the Colonel was Governor, Colonel Roosevelt watched Mr.

Barnes all day, apparently so interested that he neglected to look over mail delivered to him.

Mr. Barnes declared that the Colone represented him when, in 1910, he did not vote for the ex-President as tem-porary chairman of the state conven-

Editorials from the Albany Journal, which Mr. Barnes identified, were read to the jury. They were published dur-ing the Senatorial deadlock.

Murphy Assailed in Editorial, In one editorial there was mention of a tempest in a teapot and a row about bosses. Mr. Murphy was assailed for "apologizing for Mr. Sheehan," and was referred to as being a boss "not worthy of the name." Mr. Bowers, reading from an edi-torial, asked Mr. Barnes whether it was his personal view that a man who turned insurgent confessed that he gained his office under false pretenses. "Is the question, did I believe that when I wrote it?" asked Mr. Barnes. "No; just did you believe?" said the "I certainly did," replied Mr. Barnes.

In the Legislature most of the members worked 16 to 15 hours a day during the latter part of the session, and it was physically impossible to do justice to all the measures introduced. Members should be peal for their extra time, to the end that the state would receive the benefit of the investigations and study necessary to deal intelligently with the great questions involved. The fact that Germany once before government to enter into real cons-

Analysts Find Flaw in Note.

Only one flaw was picked by diplomatic analysts here in what was described otherwise as a "perfect note." It was where the President recalled "the human and chilghtened attitude heretofore assumed by the Imperial German government in matters of international right." and bis further statement that right," and his further statement that the United States had learned "to recognize the German views and the German influence in the field of international obligations as always engage upon the side of justice and humanity. According to some diplomats, this declaration, pleasing as it undoubtedly will be to Germany, will be emphatically objected to by the people of England and France. They will ask: What about Germany's view of treaties as "scraps of paper," her destruction of Louvain, her attack on the cathedral at Rheims her use of asphyyating research.
