Armles Are Kept Orderly.

Armies Are Kept Orderly. When the correspondent left head-quarters Monday for a visit to Tarnow and Gorlice, the front seemed as if the pause in battle operations usually fol-lowing a great victory had come and that the troops here would have to in-terrupt their advance for a brief period in order to give the men a rest from their exertions, straighten out the line and advance the railroad communica-tions to new bases. To the surprise of even military ex-tions to new bases. To the surprise of even military ex-perts, General Conrad von Hoetzendorf pushed his armies forward in a strategic plan as cleverly devised and executed as was planned for Tarnow and Gorlice. He kept the armies thoroughly in hand. Checking the tendency of one body to press forward unduly, he avoided confusion and kept the armies in orderly, symmetrical lines. lines.

Uzsok Pass Is Pivot.

Up to this point the General's scheme of battle has been to swing the Austro-German armies on Uzsok Pass as a pivot, Archduke Joseph Ferdinand's troops in the vicinity of the Vistula, troops in the vicinity of the visidia, on the outer wing, having the longest distance to advance. It is now the turn of the troops to the eastward of Uzsok and their advance is in full progress, although the movement is difficult, owing to the mountainous country and the fact that the Russians here have not yet tasted the full measure of de-feat.

Exports Not Seriously Checked. Mature reflection appears to have dispelled all fears that the sinking of the Lusitania will have the effect of checking the movement of merchandise from this country to Europe. While it may retard passenger service, authorities point out that the movement of supplies will go on as they have in the past, with the probability that if the United States becomes involved in the United States becomes involved in the trouble the addition of the naval forces would make the seas even safer in the future against German attacks on com- as cheerful as it could with its pale
