and at 7:30 was taken in a Navy launch to the flagship Wyoming, where he was a dinner guest of Admiral Fletcher and officers of the fleet.

The day's program ended with a race under the glare of searchlights, among the battleships' boat crews, and the water pageant, consisting of a parade of ships launched humorously or historically.

Tomorrow the ships swing out to sea for a Naval war game along the Atlantic Coast. The President will again review them from the deck of the Mayflower as they steam down the harbor.

Wyoming's Crew Wins Race.

The President concluded his long day by watching the boat races from the deck of the Wyoming, and there was a joyful celebration among the Wyoming crew when that battleship won the race. He stood smiling on the bridge as the bluejackets, headed by their band and cheering lustily, paraded around the deck. Soon afterwards the President returned to the deck of the Mayflower for the night. He planned to return to Washington on her after the review tomorrow.

Mrs. Daniels, wife of the Secretary of the Navy, gave a dinner tonight aboard the Dolphin, which was attended by Miss Margaret Wilson and other members of the President's personal party. Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, Mrs. George McAneny, wife of the acting Mayor, Mrs. Fletcher, wife of the Admiral; Mrs. Franklin K. Lane, Mrs. D. F. Houston and Mrs. W. C. Redfield, wives, respectively, of the Secretary of the Interior, Agriculture and Commerce.

The full text of the President's address was as follows: "I am glad to see you young and happy, and I am glad to see you with my knowledge of the affairs and policies of the United States. I think it is a natural, instructive judgment of the people of the United States that they may express their power appropriately in an efficient Navy, and their interest in it is profound. I am glad to see that Navy is expected to express their character, not within our own borders, where that character is understood, but outside our borders, where it is hoped we may occasionally touch others with some slight vision of what America stands for.

"But before I speak of the Navy of the United States I want to take advantage of the first public opportunity I have had to express my confidence and my admiration, and to say that he has my unqualified support, for I have counseled him in the past, in his position, I know how sincerely he has it at heart that everything that the Navy does and handles should be done and handled to the highest degree of efficiency is something more than organization.

"Efficiency is keynote. Efficiency runs into every well-considered plan, and it is the key to method. Efficiency runs to the extent of lifting the ideal of a service above every personal interest. So that when I speak of the Navy of the United States I am merely speaking my support of what I know every true lover of the Navy to desire and to propose; that those quiet ships, lying in the water, have no suggestion of bluster about them, no intimation of aggression. They are commanded by men thoughtful of the duty of citizens, as well as the duty of officers—men acquainted with the traditions of the great service to which they belong, men who know by touch with the people of the United States what sort of purposes they ought to entertain and what sort of discretion they ought to exercise in order to use their engines of force as engines to promote the interests of humanity.

"No Threat is Lifted. "I never go on the streets of a great city without feeling that somehow I do not confer elsewhere than on the streets with the great spirit of the people themselves, going about their business, attending to the things which concern them, and yet carrying a treasure at their hearts all the while, ready to be stirred, not only as individuals, but as members of a great nation of men, that constitutes a patriotic people.

"No Nation's Property Wanted. "For the interesting and inspiring thing about America is that she asks nothing for herself except what she has a right to ask for humanity itself. We want no nation's property; we wish to question no nation's honor; we wish to stand selfishly in the way of no nation; we want nothing that we cannot get by our own legitimate enterprise and by the inspiration of our own example and standing for these things, for it is no pretension on our part to say we are privileged to stand for what we would deprive myself of a great gratification and speaking for those things which all humanity must desire.

"When I think of the flag which those ships carry, the only touch of color about them, the only thing that moves as if it had a settled spirit in it, in their solid structure, it seems to me that I see alternate strips of parchment on which are written the rights of liberty and justice and strips of parchment on which are written the duties of citizenship and the responsibilities of leadership.

THAW HEARING HELD UP

HABEAS CORPUS PROCEEDINGS ARE STAYED BY COURT.

Slayer of Stanford White to Have Opportunity to Fight Appeal by State Next Friday.

NEW YORK, May 17.—An order issued late today by Presiding Justice Ingraham in the appellate division of the Supreme Court staying all proceedings in the habeas corpus petition of Harry K. Thaw, in which Thaw seeks to have a jury in the Supreme Court pass on his sanity, brought another delay in the long-drawn-out proceedings against the slayer of Stanford White.

Thaw's case had been twice called during the day in the Supreme Court and Justice Hendrick had postponed the case until tomorrow at the request of Deputy Attorney-General Becker. The justice at the time said that unless some action was taken in the meantime by the appellate division he would begin the hearing tomorrow.

The stay granted by the appellate division is part of an action begun by Frank A. Cook, of the Attorney-General's office. The order directs Thaw to show cause Friday why a stay should not issue pending the determination of an appeal taken by the Attorney-General from the decision of the appellate division last Friday, in which the ruling issued by the Supreme Court was that the justice hearing as to Thaw's sanity was upheld.

SPECIAL SESSION URGED

ADVOCATES OF SHIP PURCHASE BILL WANT ACTION.

Brief Exists That Measure Will Be Carried at Next Gathering and Many Democrats Want Meeting at Once.

OREGONIAN NEWS BUREAU, Washington, May 17.—Interviews given by Democratic Senators and Representatives since the sinking of the Lusitania, and slight intimations gathered in official circles in Washington, indicate that the ship purchase bill, which caused a serious tie-up at the last session of Congress, will be revived at the next session, and will have the full strength of the Administration behind it. The advocates of the ship purchase bill maintain that there is more reason for its enactment now than there was last Winter, and as the destruction of foreign ships continues, the necessity for American ships will continue to grow.

SECRET SERVICE MEN ACT

Vice-President of National Suffrage Association Deplores Act Which She Says Belongs to Militant England, Not to America.

NEW YORK, May 17.—Mrs. Stanley McCormick, vice-president of the National Woman Suffrage Association, in a statement tonight, declared that the National association had no sympathy with the act of two women suffragists who today caused a scene by trying to reach President Wilson in the hotel where he was a guest of honor at a luncheon.

"They were taken in hand by secret service men, but prior to this they had succeeded in delivering to Secretary Tumulty a letter for the President. It was written on the stationery of the National executive committee of the Congressional Union for Woman Suffrage, and appealed to the President for his powerful aid to remove the political disability of women."

Mrs. McCormick, in her statement, said: "The National association deprecates the lack of courtesy shown toward the President of the United States by a small band of American suffragists. It is an unfortunate combination of the English methods to the American situation, which in no way warrants them."

"The President, so far as we know, has never refused to receive the women suffragists of this country who properly approached. It is this sort of thing which, in the opinion of many women, might serve to set back suffrage in this country."

slon not been limited to adjourn March 4, the filibuster doubtless would have failed, though it might have been continued a month or two beyond the time when it did collapse. While there has been no intimation from the White House that the President intends to call a special session of Congress for any cause, some of the strongest supporters of the Administration have advised that an extraordinary session be called to consider a ship purchase bill. Their advocacy of this move is two-fold; they want a ship purchase bill passed as speedily as possible and they feel that the international situation is such that it might be well for the President to have Congress on hand, in case emergency should arise making a session absolutely necessary.
