About two score guests attended the wedding and the breakfast which fol-lowed at Hotel Benson. With the exception of half a dozen close friends, the guests were relatives of the young couple. Mr. and Mrs. A. F. McClaine, of Spokane, parents of the bridegroom, came to attend the function, and Misa K. M. Clum, of St. Paul, an aunt of the K. M. Clum, of St. Faul, an aunt of the bride, came to this city several days ago for the affair. Other relatives were Mrs. C. P. Johnston, an aunt of the bride; her cousin, Miss Suzanne Johnston, and Joseph Johnston, all of Seattle, and Mrs. L. L. Love, of Tacoma. From Silverton came a number of rel-atives of the bridegroom, including Dr. and Mrs. C. W. Keene and two lit-tle girls; the Misses McClaine and Miss Cavanaugh.

Once upon a time, thousands of thousands of years ago, there lived in the sands of years ago, there lived in the East a King who was also something of a magician. One day he was going on a trip across the Great Desert, and it was warm—so warm that the King got tired and in such a bad humor that he wearied out all his slaves, so that none were left to fan or hold the big umbralls that was alwaves over his umbrella that was always over his head. The sand blew in his eyes, the winds burned his face and the sun of Women's Clubs and others who are leaders in women's organizations. Mrs. Nathaniel E. Harris, of Bradford, Pa., president of the National Council, had he did not want to do any kind of work in warm weather. Presently far out over the desert there rose a faint cloud, and it came nearer and nearer to the King's tent. At last he saw it was a large flock of birds crossing the sands on their way north.

"Let us hover over the King's tent and shield him from the sun!" cried the leader. So till sunset the whole flock hung over the tent, keeping off the sun's rays and fanning the King with the constant beating of their King wings. And the King had a nice nap, soothed and cooled by the kindness of the birds.

the birds. "What reward shall I give you?" cried the King at eve, when he awoke in a good humor. "We did not do this for a reward," sang the birds, "but if you desire we would like a remembrance in that we might wear a crown as long as we live."

So at night the King turned round five times and bowed to the north and to the south and to the east and to the
