NEW CODE OPPOSED

Owners of Large Buildings Protest Proposed Change.

EXTRA FIRE HAZARD CITED

C. Lewis Mead Declares Erection of Cheaper Structures Unfair to Those Who Have Complied With Stricter Requirement.

Owners of large buildings are up in arms against the proposal of the city's building code revision committee to let down the bars so as to permit one and two-story buildings of mill construction within the business districts of Portland. A petition protesting against the change has been circulated by C. Lewis Mead and has been signed by owners of many large buildings.

The law now requires fireproof construction. It is proposed to amend it so that the interior of one and two-story structures can be built of wood. The building owners declare that this not only is unfair to them but it is a step backward in the plan to make the city safe from a fire standpoint.

The proposition will be taken before the Realty Board at a meeting this morning at which the subject will be thoroughly discussed.

"We contend that such a change would be a step backwards," said C. Lewis Mead yesterday. "It would be detrimental to the up-building of a progressive Portland.

The present restricted district is comparatively small, comprising about 60 blocks, where most of the better buildings have been erected complying with the fire-proof code, and at this time it would be unjust to change the law permitting the erection of these cheaper buildings adjoining class A.

CRITIC IS ANSWERED

Mrs. Tate Indignant Over Remarks of Mrs. Kelley.

MRS. SCHOFF IS DEFENDED

Congress of Mothers' Resolutions on Child Labor Upheld and Its Head Is Held No Traitor to Child Welfare Cause.

The statements made by Mrs. Florence Kelley, general secretary of the Consumers' League, who took exceptions to the resolutions adopted at the recent convention of the National Congress of Mothers, have aroused the indignation of Mrs. Robert Tate, one of the vice-presidents of the National Congress of Mothers.

"Mrs. Frederic Schoff, our president, is not a traitor to the cause of child welfare," said Mrs. Tate yesterday, "and it is not right to say the Congress of Mothers is letting 'down the bars'."

"The National Congress of Mothers and Parent-Teacher Associations stand for 'child welfare'."

Reaction Is Feared.

"We are practical and we feel there must be a reaction from too stringent child labor laws that are enforced upon all alike without the use of any discretion.

"For instance, here if a widowed mother has an able-bodied boy a few months younger than 16 years and if he is able and willing to work to help his mother, he cannot do so. I consider the Oregon law too stringent. Discretionary power should be used in cases. Much depends on the individual and the home represented. As it is here, the Child Labor Commission is arbitrary.

"The present law says that a child must finish the seventh grade before a certificate can be issued. In many rural districts school is in session only six months. The effort to increase this period to eight months was defeated at the last Legislature. Many an able boy cannot get through his seventh grade by the time he should be allowed to work in vacation.

"Widowed Mother Suffers."

"Often a widowed mother has to accept charity through the conditions arising by the fine lines drawn in granting certificates allowing the boys to work. Wouldn't work be far better for a big, healthy boy than idleness? Thrift and industry and usefulness cannot be encouraged when a Commission has such sway.

"There is only one other state besides Oregon (Louisiana) that issues child labor certificates, as is the custom and rule here. In all large cities these certificates are issued by the Board of Education, which, through its teachers, is better qualified to judge whether or not the child should be given work.

"The Congress of Mothers is not alone in its belief that children who are well grown should be allowed to do some work, but the congress is firm in its stand for the welfare of the child. It is directly opposed to allowing little children to work where there is danger to health, to morals or to the gaining of educational advantages.

Resolutions Are Explained.

"In those resolutions which Mrs. Kelley attacked so bitterly, we showed our good faith toward the little people, who are our first thought and care. We state that our principles are that children be prevented from being employed where there is danger to health and character; we ask that employment certificates be given by the educational authorities after a certificate from the physician has shown the child's mental and physical fitness; we advocate provision for prosecution of parents or educational authorities who abuse the discretionary power."

Mrs. Tate quoted Dr. P. P. Claxton, United States Commissioner of Education, as having said, "We must protect children against exploitation and against overwork in factories, mills, shops and mines; but it is just about as necessary to find them some suitable employment. I do not believe it is possible to educate a child who does not have some purpose for production work. It is good for them spiritually, morally and physically."

Judge Lindsay Quoted.

Judge Ben Lindsay was quoted as saying, "There is always hope for the boy who works, especially the boy who likes to work."

Mrs. R. E. Bondurant, who is a member of the widows' pension committee, has had wide experience working among the families of the widows under her charge, says: "I heartily endorse the resolutions of the National Congress of Mothers. There should be discretionary power granted. There is none now. Many a big boy, behind in his classes, begs to be allowed to work and help his mother. He may be a man in size and strength, but he is not allowed to work. As a consequence, he plays truant, is taken to the detention home, gets into bad habits and his mother is left to charity." Mrs. Trumbull, the secretary of the Child Labor Commission here, will not grant a certificate for that boy to work.

School Teachers Agree.

"I see no reason why the Congress of Mothers should not pass the resolutions they did. It was time something should be done. The school teachers I have talked with believe as I do. The social workers know that things here are wrong. Of course, I am strongly opposed to child labor, with its cruelities and dreadful features, but, I repeat, we must get on a basis where some discretion is used."

Mrs. Florence Kelley, whose criticism of Mrs. Frederic Schoff and the Congress of Mothers has created the stir among members of the organization, was the honored guest at a luncheon given by the Professional Women's League. She made the statement that Mrs. Schoff was a traitor to child labor and that the organization of which Mrs. Schoff is president had let down the bars for child labor. She made these statements when told by Mrs. Millie H. Trumbull, secretary of the Oregon Child Labor Commission, that the National Congress of Mothers had adopted resolutions opening the way for a certain amount of child labor.

Dr. Coe Sues Former Wife.

A partition of the Henry W. Coe home property at Twenty-fifth and Lovejoy streets is sought in a suit filed yesterday by Dr. Coe against Mrs. Viola M. Coe, his former wife. Dr. Coe asks that his one-third interest in the home be sold so that he can pay a substantial
