District Forecaster Predicts Fair Weather After Long Period of Daily Rain.

Despite Frequent Showers, Total for City Not Yet Normal, but State Gets More Than Average and Records of Bureau Cited.

"Rain of .01 inch or more has fallen on 18 days this month. In 1911 there were the same number of rainy days in May, in 1908, 1905 and 1902 as well as on many other occasions there were more rainy days in May than this year. "That it has rained nearly every day since May 8, coupled with the fact that the preceding Spring and Winter months were unusually dry, has created an impression that the recent spell of wet weather was an exception to the rule."

PORTLAND DECLARED ONLY CITY INSTRUCTING PARENTS.

Dr. Anna L. Strong, National Child Welfare Worker, Commends Work Carried On in This City.

At last! Pair weather in Portland is unconditionally forecast for today.

While many think the recent period of rainy weather in Portland was unusual for this season of the year, such is not the case, according to District Forecaster Beals, who says that the rainfall for the month yet is below normal. Records indicate that this year's rainfall is equaled about once in three years.

"Up to date our May rainfall is 2:34 inches, while the normal for the month is 2.35 inches," Mr. Beals says, "Therefore we must have a fall of .62 inch within the next two days to equal the normal. Should we get more than .62 inch the normal will be exceeded for the first time since last September, when the rainfall was 3.10 inches, or 1.26 inches greater than usual.

"There are two reasons why I came to Portland," said Dr. Anna L. Strong, of the children's blueau yesterday afternoon. The first is because your educational bureau yesterday afternoon.
