LAND GOSPEL PREACHED

HILL RAILROAD AGRICULTURAL EXHIBENTS REACH BEND.

Meetings Reported Well Attended and Addresses by Professor Shaw Create Comment.

BY ADDISON BENNETT. BEND, Or., June 2.—(Special).—In the agricultural campaign being conducted by the joint forces of the Hill railroad lines, two meetings were held today, one this morning at the Wilson schoolhouse, in the Pilot Butte section, and another in the afternoon at the Grange Hall, about eight miles east of Bend.

The principal address at each meeting was made by Professor Shaw, who was followed by Messrs. Graham and Arney, of the railway forces, and Agriculturist Lovett, of Crook County.

Professor Shaw is a speaker of marked magnetism. He has a wealth of information at his tongue's end, which he imparts in a convincing manner. Fully understanding his subject, he is able to help every settler who will listen to and heed him, and from the way his auditors seem to defer to his judgment it seems assured that his work here will accomplish much good.

Both of the meetings today were well attended and Mr. Shaw was bombarded with questions, most all of which he answered satisfactorily to the audience and the inquirers.

Some queries were made with a view of imparting instead of acquiring knowledge, but the professor handled the situation gracefully and goodly. The meeting last night at Tumalo was largely attended and the audience seemed to be made up of people far above the average intelligence.

The professor was at his best and his remarks called forth frequent bursts of applause.

Tonight there will be a meeting here at the Commercial Club rooms and tomorrow we go to Prineville. The weather is fine but rather cool. The country looks fine, very fine, better than I ever saw it before, and the crop outlook is splendid.

FRUIT AGENCIES AT WAR

North Pacific Distributors' Subsidiary Invades Spokane.

SPOKANE, Wash., June 2.—(Special).—What amounts to open warfare for the fruit tonnage of the Spokane district between the Spokane Fruitgrowers' Company and organizations affiliated with the North Pacific Fruit Distributors developed today, following the opening of an office here by the Central Idaho-Washington Fruitgrowers' Association and the announcement that the association, a sub-central of the Distributors, had extended its territory to include the Spokane district.

Speaking for the Idaho-Washington association, K. H. Dixon, who until June 1 was publicity manager of the Distributors, announced that an aggressive campaign to procure fruit tonnage in the territory of the Spokane Fruitgrowers' Company would be undertaken and that local associations of growers subsidiary to the Distributors would be formed.

J. H. Robbins, general manager of the North Pacific Fruit Distributors, denies responsibility for the invasion of the Spokane field by the sub-central organization, but officers of the Spokane Fruitgrowers' Company openly charge that the move has been fostered by the Distributors with the hope of securing the local organization, which withdrew its affiliation with the Distributors early this year.
