

INSURANCE SALOR OF DRY ROBBED

Jack Kling Has Theory His Auto Assaults Thought Him Government Spy.

CREW HOSTILITY RELATED

Man Attacked in Car Believes He Aroused Friends of Allies Who Followed Him From South to Prevent Carrying Out Plans.

That Jack Kling may have been taken for an Austrian spy is a theory on which the police are working in connection with the remarkable attack upon the man, who, until a few days ago, was second mate of the British barque Invergarry.

Although Kling says he was robbed of $65 and a $25 watch while in an automobile with a man known to him as McArthur and a girl introduced as McArthur's daughter, he believes that robbery was only a pretext for the attack, and the police accept his story as worthy of investigation.

Several circumstances lend weight to the theory that Kling has been attacked as a spy, or at least, because he had given offense to some sympathizer with Austrian enemies.

By his own admission he had falsely represented himself as a British subject during the voyage from London to San Francisco, and at San Francisco he had been introduced as a citizen of Great Britain.

These circumstances are cited by Kling as supporting the theory that he may have been followed to Portland by someone who had seen him a spy in the employ of Austria.

Hostility Developed, He Says. Kling shipped on the Invergarry 19 months ago, he says, before the outbreak of the European hostilities.

While on the ship Kling says he represented himself as a naturalized British subject.

He says he met McArthur on the train coming from Flavel to Portland, and learned that Kling was an Austrian by birth.

When Kling and McArthur separated in Portland McArthur invited him for a motor trip that Wednesday night, naming the postoffice as the meeting place.

McArthur and Kling met at the appointed place, and Kling was introduced to him by a man who was about 17 years old, Kling says.

Attack and Drug Related. While the machine was crossing a bridge over the river, probably the Hawthorne bridge, the girl suddenly turned her hand over to Kling.

McArthur stopped the car with a jerk, Kling continued. "He thrust a gun in my face and ordered me to hold up my hands. The girl bound and gagged me as I sat with my hands above my head. I must have been drugged, for I knew nothing more until this morning."

Mr. Rankin found Kling in the bran bin when he went to feed his stock yesterday morning.

Four Brothers Killed in War. Kling says that his father was a Captain in the Austrian army and that four of his brothers were killed in the war.

With the allies, the ambassador is said to have been convinced by his talk with Mr. Wilson of the necessity of purpose in upholding the neutrality of the United States.

On the other hand officials conversant with the feeling in Berlin of official quarters toward the United States are not sanguine that a satisfactory reply will be received, because of the evidence that the admiralty and food staffs have been dominating the foreign office, as not infrequently is the case, with nations at war.

President Wilson worked alone today on his communication, seeing few callers. He studied memoranda submitted by Secretary Bryan, Counselor Lansing and members of the Cabinet, embodying a variety of suggestions.

The principle which is to be placed squarely before Germany is such a way as to elicit either an affirmative or negative answer to the question of American Government's last note as follows:

"The lives of non-combatants, whether they be of neutral citizenship or citizens of one of the nations at war, cannot lawfully or rightfully be placed in jeopardy by the capture or destruction of an unarmed merchantman" and the imperial government must "recognize also, as all other nations do, the obligation to take the usual precautions of visit and search."

In view of the statement in the German note that reliable information is in the hands of the Lusitania was armed, the American Government intends to re-state that it made full and searching investigation before the Lusitania sailed and that its good faith is pledged to the assertion that no guns, either mounted or unmounted, were carried by the vessel.

Was out of Dilemma Seen. In many quarters it was believed Germany might find a way out of the dilemma by accepting the statement of the United States and superseding its own evidence, declaring that a mistake had been made, and paving the way for the cessation of reparations.

Little importance is attached by officials to the affidavit which the German Embassy has transmitted to the State Department alleging that there were guns aboard the Lusitania.

Woman Hears Talk of Guns. Mrs. Josephine Weir, a boardinghouse-keeper in New York, is the signer of a second affidavit, swearing she heard Leitch speak of four guns on the ship.

Mrs. Josephine Weir, a boardinghouse-keeper in New York, is the signer of a second affidavit, swearing she heard Leitch speak of four guns on the ship.

All four affidavits have been referred to the Department of Justice, which is investigating. To controvert them the United States has its own resident collector Malone and his inspectors.

"We looked everywhere," Mr. Malone is quoted as having said, "on all the decks of the vessel, and no guns but saw none, mounted or unmounted."

BILLY BURKE HAS AUDIENCE AS EVER

As "Jerry" Charming Sprite-Like Actress Is in Distinctive Role.

ARTISTRY SHINES FORTH

Pleasing Comedy Delightfully Put on by Attractive Star; Play is One to Bring Laughter From All Who See.

CAST OF "JERRY." Joan Doubleday... Selena Johnson. Harriet Townsend... Alice John.

BY LEONE CASS BAER. If by any chance you have failed in reason to be won over to the distinctive artistry—for I insist it is distinctive of its kind and there's no question but that it's delightful artistry—of Billy Burke, you will hardly fail to captivate when you see her in her present offering of "Jerry."

The little comedy she brings is one of the usual of the thick upcuring washes, written around her wonderful individuality, her coos and gurgling laughter, her capricious antics and her undeniably lovely person.

All of which is to say that her offering is one of the bright bits of the season and a fashionable assemblage last night at the Bellamy theatre.

CHEERY'S IS A MAN'S STORE

Where Men Buy Their Clothes ON CREDIT!

Wide-awake men like CHEERY'S for the ease and convenience of their INSTALLMENT PAYMENT PLAN; for the quiet, cool atmosphere of their shop; for its friendly spirit of courtesy.

Last week Blank sold himself very much in need of a new suit. He didn't have the money and he didn't care to wait and save it.

So he did the natural thing—went up to CHEERY'S and got fitted in a handsome Summer tweed that becomes him and looks a lot more expensive than it really was.

When any of his friends complimented Blank on his "class," he gives them the "dope" straight and tells them how his suit cost him only $10 at the CHEERY'S and what splendid INSTALLMENT TERMS CHEERY'S fixed up with him.

CHEERY'S keeps open Saturday evenings and has in their wardrobe—and the address, as you see, is 339-331 Washington street, in the Pittock block.

Later on it has been the center of railway building operations, for the Canadian Northern and Kettle valley lines have both built through it.

WOMAN REFUSES OPERATION. Tells How She Was Saved by Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Louisville, Ky.—"I think if more suffering women would take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound they would enjoy better health. I suffered from a female trouble, and the doctors decided I had a tumorous growth and would have to be operated upon, but I refused as I do not believe in operations. I had fainting spells, blood, and could hardly stand the pain in my back. I heard of the virtues of your Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and I am so thankful I did, for I am now a well woman. I sleep better, do all my household and take long walks. I never fail to praise Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for my good health."
