GUESTS TAKE RIVER TRIP

Visiting Clubwomen Go to Bonneville on Undine.

The glorious scenery of the Columbia River was revealed to several hundred clubwomen visiting from the Middle West and Eastern states yesterday when the local women of the club boarded the steamer Undine with a trip up the Columbia.

Perfect weather made the trip an ideal one. The party went as far as Bonneville, where the steamer was chartered for a special consignment of choice Hood River strawberries.

Multnomah Falls and all the smaller falls were viewed. Especially attractive to the local women were the mountain peaks, Hood, St. Helens, Rainier and Jefferson. The boat returned to Portland about 7 P. M. in time for luncheon at the hotel. The National president, Mrs. Percy V. Pennybacker, was indisposed and was unable to take part in the excursion.

This afternoon the clubwomen will be guests of the Council of Jewish Women at a tea at the Neighborhood House and at Lincoln High School, where the Portland Woman's Club will present Dr. Henry Lawrence Southwick.

The Maid's Sitting-Room.
In the discussion we have been having as to the preference given by women who earn their own living, for work in stores and factories to work in the home, we have come to the subject of the domestic worker's accommodations.

Some mistresses, as we said yesterday, give their helpers a pleasant bedroom. Some do not. But nearly all fail to give them an attractive room in which to receive their friends.

As things are at present, our domestic helpers must entertain their friends in the kitchen or at best in the dining-room. And in some homes they must ask their friends to come to the back door for admission.

There is something about the American spirit that does not take kindly to this arrangement. And especially does the caller object to this position if he happens to be a young man. Nor is this feeling snobbishness. There is a bit of self-respect in him that protests. If a man cares a lot for a woman, he may submit for a time to being placed in this position. But he will, as quickly as possible, rescue the woman he loves from a condition that places both her and himself in such a situation.
